Kennedale Wildcats. For most of us, that is just one of the many identities we hold. Each of us is unique because of our minds, our choices, and our personalities. We define ourselves by becoming football players, choir singers, tennis players, art club members, thespians, members of the yearbook staff, or a number of other school organizations. We define ourselves by becoming youth group leaders, Sonic workers, Albertson's cashiers, sisters, brothers, sons, daughters, college applicants, best friends, and so much more. High school is a crucial moment in our lives when we define ourselves and choose the paths we will follow for much of our lives. We become individuals, each person as unique as the next; no longer grouped together as children, ready to face the world with who we've become. We have chosen who we are from the decisions we have made in the past, and we will continue to define ourselves as we continue to grow. Not only do we grow and define ourselves on an individual basis, but we also define our community and our school. Defining the identity of KHS is the job of each student and faculty member. We define Kennedale at sports events, in the school report card, in club events, and in the local media. We define Kennedale in our actions, in our spirit, and in our Wildcat pride. KHS is facing a teenage-like phase... we are no longer a small school. We are growing faster and faster, with new buildings, more faculty, and more students. We are making a name for ourselves throughout the metroplex. We no longer have to say that Kennedale is next to Arlington or Fort Worth for someone to know where we are. We are establishing our Wildcat territory through school spirit and media coverage, like the 99.5 The Wolf pep rally this year. Our academic lives have become tougher with a stronger academic program that defines Kennedale as a school where students will learn what is needed to be successful. KHS is making a name in sports, too. Our programs have gotten tougher and better through the years and more teams are beginning to worry about facing the Wildcats. We are better and stronger than ever and we are defining ourselves as a school to be reckoned with. How will you define yourself this year?

expressing our individuality

We are a group of students that can be linked and connected through activities, through classes, and through our simple attendance at Kennedale. Each one of us, however, is our own unique person. We are all different, from the grades we make on tests to the shoes we buy to the futures we want to have. We are creating ourselves; we are defining our own identities. We aren't just defining ourselves at school either. In the community and at home, we are creating identities for ourselves as well. We are living our lives and becoming more responsible, we are defining ourselves as prevailing adults. We create identities as this or that of our families; we choose to no longer be in the shadow of someone else, but rather step into our own light and define who we are. Part of this defining process includes various aspects of our lives. At school it is developed through our school spirit and through our grades and activities. With pep rallies we can let loose, even if just a little, and show our personalities to the rest of our classmates. We can show our Wildcat pride with the others around us and create Wildcat identity. Through our pets we can also show the world who we are; it is said that people choose pets that exemplify their personality type. So, even if you didn't choose your pet, you can tell something about the person who did; and when it comes time for each of us to choose pets of our own, we can keep in mind what we are telling the world. Through our travels to other continents or just to the house next door, we express our feelings and desires. Many of us have chosen to take breath taking, life changing, or just fun trips on vacation. These trips can have major impacts on our lives that help define who we are; or they could just be something fun that we have always wanted to do. Halloween is a time to become someone else for a night; a time for each of us to take hold of the inner child within and let it loose for lots of candy and laughs. We can forget our lives for a moment and just have fun. Our cars can tell loads of stories about all of us. From the first drive to the one with the crash, our cars can tell the stories of our lives. Our cars tell people about who we are or maybe who we want to be. Our lives in high school can define our identities now and maybe even in the future. How are you defining yourself?

A unique group, "The Wild Cats", joined the school spirit realm this year. The idea for this crazy dance team came from seniors Erin Hunt and Hannah Anderson, a.k.a. Willy the Wildcat. "We wanted a new and different way to raise school spirit," commented Anderson. The members, juniors Valen Thomas, Mike Reed, and Ben Taylor, plan to continue the spirit group next year as well. "We plan on going big or going home," said Thomas. The cheerleaders, Aristokat coach Victoria Hatcher, Hunt, and Anderson helped the boys come up with their routines for pep rallies, but the boys were completely on their own when it comes to the costumes. "When coming up with costumes we asked ourselves, 'What's the least amount of clothing we can wear?'" We also consider the pep rally theme and the song that we've picked," explained Reed. Another first occurred when students sent in the most amount of texts to the number 94525 and won a pep rally hosted by the country station 99.5 The Wolf. "This is an accomplishment in itself," explained Mrs. Wade, "since Kennedale is considerably smaller compared to the other schools who were also trying to win the pep rally." KHS and its 950 students beat out high schools with over 3,000 students including Arlington, Martin, Lamar, Bowie, and Sam Houston. Before the pep rally, students who arrived early enough received free Chick-fil-A sandwiches and participated in a pull-up contest for military T-shirts. The actual pep rally consisted of performances from the Aristokats, the cheerleaders, and the band Lady Antebellum sponsored by the radio station. The Chick-fil-A cows, sporting a Kennedale cheerleader costume and a football uniform, danced with the cheerleaders and led the sophomores and juniors in a battle cry face off resulting in a win for the juniors.

"The Wild Cats" boost the spirit level with fun and crazy routines

definingFACT

Our very devoted cheerleaders worked over 45 hours on decorating our gym for all of the home game pep rallies. That's almost 8 hours per pep rally!

Screaming loud and proud, juniors Angela King, Tara Davis, Lacey Guerin, and Stacia Newton, yell themselves hoarse in an attempt to win the spirit stick for the junior class. "Pep rallies are always a fun way to be school spirited and support our teams," shared Newton. Not only did shouting show your class' school spirit, but for some students winning the spirit stick meant receiving extra credit or extra bathroom passes from their teachers.

Breaking it down, juniors Valen Thomas, Ben Taylor, and Mike Reed show off their dance skills and spirit at a Friday pep-rally. "We express ourselves through dance," commented Taylor. "We also wanted to bring more spirit to the pep rallies," added Reed. The boys definitely added more spirit, not to mention laughs with their crazy routines.

On home game nights, you could feel the energized spirit from the fans throughout Wildcat Stadium. "I like painting my body and being spirited at our games because it is fun to support our team," said freshman Tony Mercado.

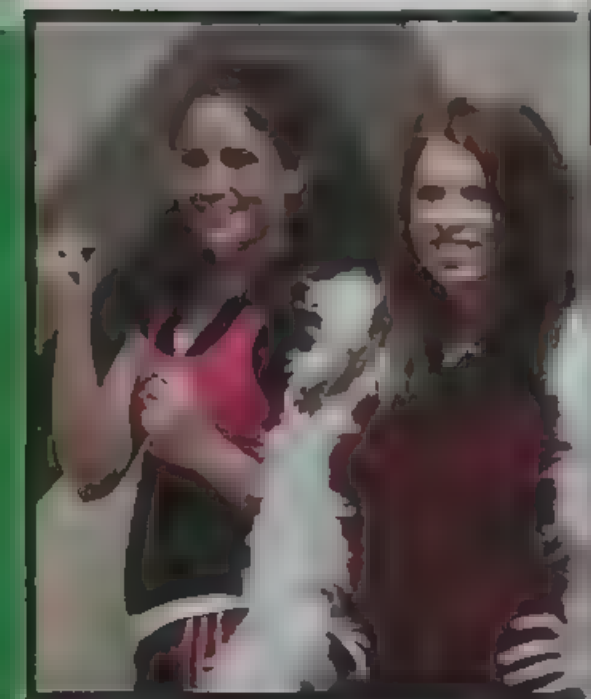

ABOVE Amped up with a mic, seniors Ryan Collins and Magan Westbrook holler out the senior battle cry. As seniors, it was especially important to win the spirit stick for the sake of senior pride. "All the noise in addition to the band playing and all the skits and shows get me rowdy during our pep rallies," explained Westbrook.

Students show spirit during Spirit Week and Homecoming

The week began with the creative spirit dress-up days. From crazy socks and hats to dressing up like celebrities, and from showing our tacky side to going green for the big game, students worked hard all week to pump up the spirit for Friday. Part of the tradition always includes the class hall decorating contest. This time we had a switch up in the hallways. For the first time, the sophomores moved into the 200 hall while the freshman spiced up the band hall. This allowed students with special needs in the 400 hallway to be free from distractions. This year special judges were brought in for the contest including Mayor Bryan Lankhorst, "Wildcat for Life" Robbie Hill, and his grandmother and retired KISD staff member, Mrs. Hill. Their decision was announced at the special Homecoming pep rally and the seniors took home the prize with their "Highway to Success" theme which featured props from previous halls and a peak into the seniors' futures. The Homecoming game this year featured a 55-7 victory over Whitney. During halftime, the Homecoming court took their spots on the field and the King and Queen were announced. The prestigious honor went to Joey Lucero and Marissa Ericson. "Ever since I was a little girl, it had always been my dream to be a Homecoming Queen," commented Ericson. After winning this honor, Lucero shared a few things about the rules of the crown. "It's true, I do get to keep the robe and crown for one year, and I do occasionally roam the house in only my crown, robe, and underwear. I would like to thank my friends, my family, my brothers on the offensive line, and my sweetheart Jessica Biel!"

ABOVE Jumping for joy, junior Breanna Fleeman shows off her new pride and joy, a BMW Z3. Most students must get a job in order to sustain the maintenance on their vehicle and Fleeman was one of them. "I used to work at Camp Thurman over the summer, and I've been saving up my money just to pay for the gas!" she complained as she imagined her entire paycheck going towards her car.

RIGHT Chilling out in her beautiful red convertible, senior Taryn Smith enjoys the feel of the fresh air in her new Mazda Miata. "My old car had really bad mechanical problems. The engine was worn out and even started to smoke! Luckily, my parents realized that I needed a new car and bought me this as a graduation present too." Smith also commented, "I love my car because it has a radio, and I don't have to bust out with computer speakers and an iPod anymore."

Geared up in camo, junior Cody Ostrout takes pride in his monstrous Chevy Silverado. "I'm very happy with my truck because it fits my lifestyle. All of my sweat and cash was put into it, and in the end, it paid off," Ostrout shared.

need for speed

Students work around gas prices to enjoy their rides

Despite the gas prices soaring high and the insurance costs increasing every year, students are still eager to receive their drivers' licenses. Not only does driving make it easier for teens to travel around, but they also develop independence and self-confidence for the future. The ability to drive yourself to the places you need to go gives you the ability to become more self-reliant and efficient. "I hate asking my sister for rides," freshman Vincent Nguyen exclaimed with anticipation at the chance to take driver's ed this year. "When I get my license, I can go wherever I want, whenever I want!" Over 30,000 teenagers, ages sixteen to eighteen years old, receive their licenses every year. Along with the enjoyment of free will on the road, responsibilities and jobs also develop. "I'm working to pay off my car. Even though I use it to haul hay, feed horses, or to even tow cars, my truck still looks good," senior Aaron Arter boasts about his Chevy Cheyenne truck. While some are fortunate enough to be given cars from their parents, many teens have to work hard to earn the car that they desire. Senior Kayla Carnagie commented, "For now, I'm driving my sister's car, but I'm looking for a new one. I'm going to help pay for it so I can get one that I like." Owning a car has its positive and negative aspects, but overall, it is a privilege that many will experience. Not only should you remember to always buckle your seatbelt, keep in mind the constructive and wise words from Mrs. Worley: "No drinking and driving, no drugs, and no babies!"

In idle for the moment, sophomore Caleb Jurchisin relaxes against the side of his black coated Mustang machine. "I like my car because its loud and its fast engine can be heard miles away! The great sound system and good gas mileage has convinced me to keep it until college," Jurchisin said with pride. He also added. "I mow lawns to get money to fix my car. It's been a tough task but look how fine my car is!"

With oil approaching $100 per barrel in November 2007, gas prices continued to soar. We went broke at the pump with gas nearing $3.00 per gallon!

After a nine month countdown, the clock hits 2:45 and school is let out. The sun is shining, the wind is blowing and you are ready to begin your summer. Summer activities range from sitting at home doing absolutely nothing while enjoying the lack of school, to making a little extra money during your free time. Another alternative to working and sitting at home is going on that anticipated vacation. People vacation in places here in Texas, throughout the United States, and even to foreign countries as far as Thailand and England. "This summer I visited the villages of Luwingu and Chakaba in Zambia, Africa," shared junior Ryan Johnson. Johnson spent three days inside a truck traveling from village to village spreading the word of Christ. "These two villages had this gigantic soccer game (at least to their standards) and afterwards everyone listened to this huge sermon and about eighty to ninety people gave their heart to Christ," commented Johnson. Another trip to a far away land was traveled by senior Michael Ivison. "I went to Thailand this summer and stayed in a village called Ban Nam Khem," said Ivison. For those trips a little closer to home, senior Reanelle Navea vacationed in Canada and senior James Wood spent two weeks in San Francisco, California. Students aren't the only ones who enjoy visiting new places; a number of faculty members spent their three months off checking out places outside the Texas borders. Mrs. Naughton flew to England and visited places such as Shakespeare's Globe Theatre and Buckingham Palace with her family. No matter where we went, our summer was unique.

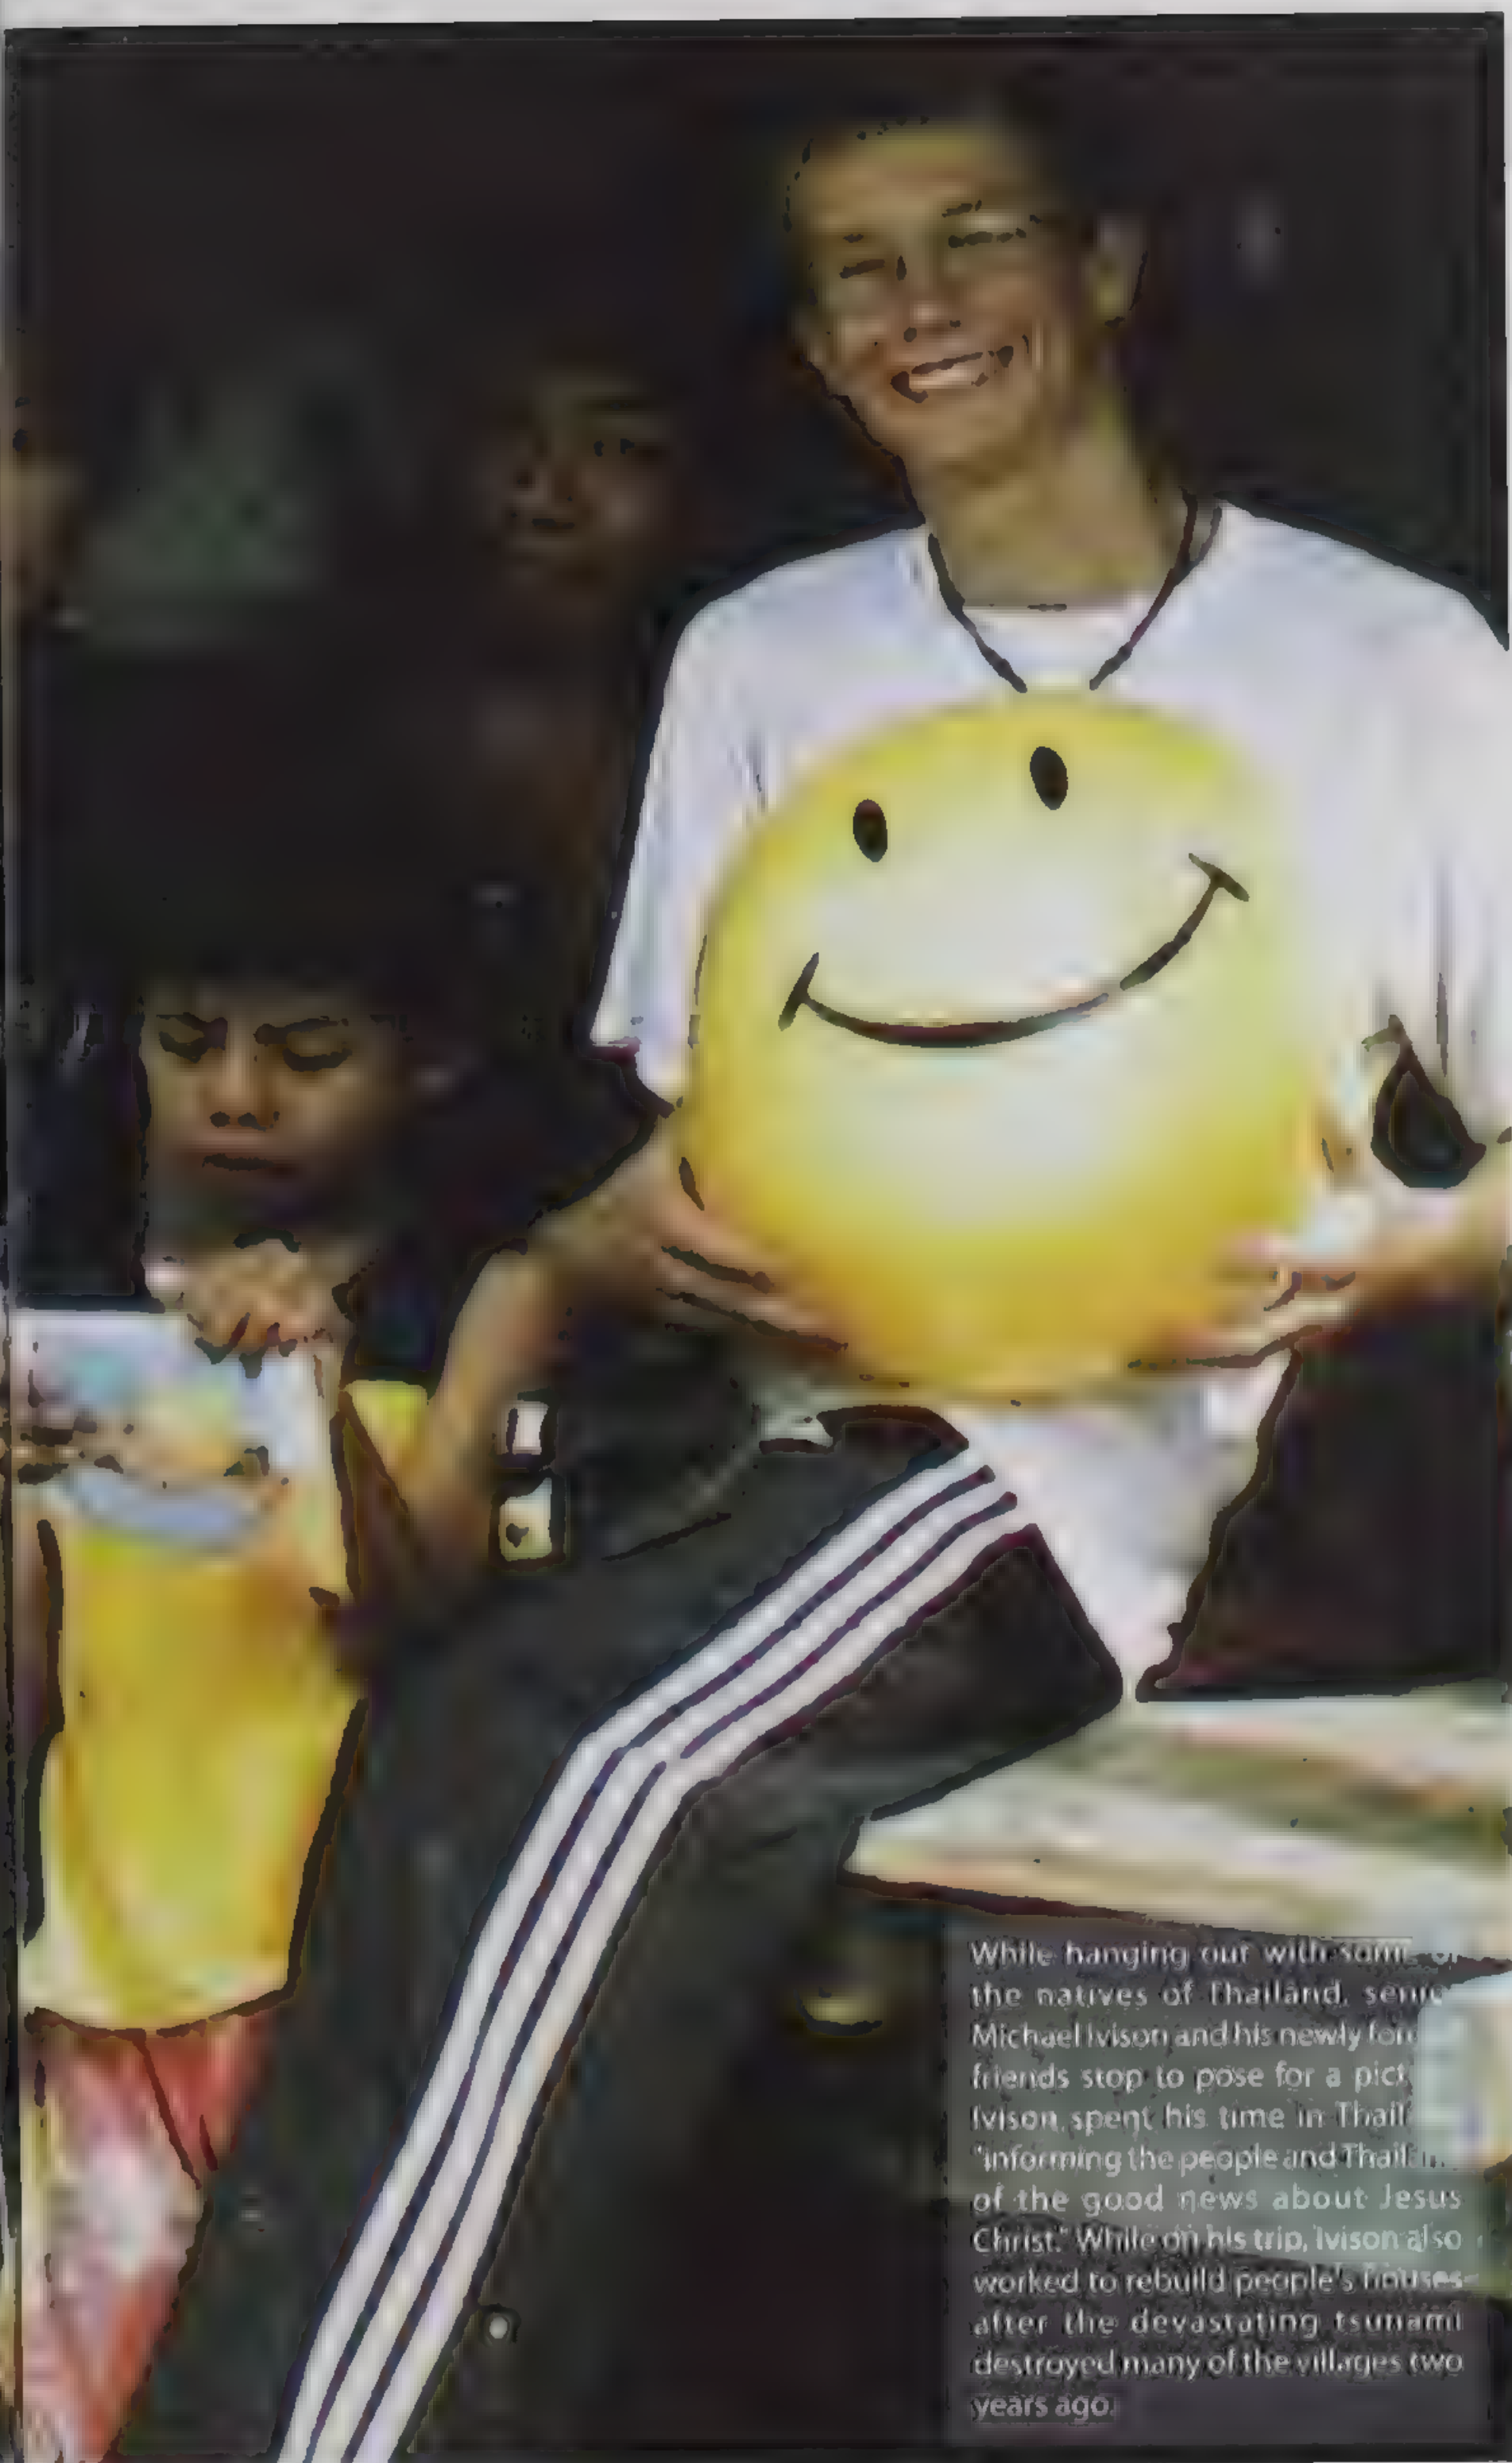

around the world

Faculty and students travel the world for work and play

Teaching the children of the village of Luwingu American customs, Ryan Johnson and his friends put their thumbs up. Johnson went with his church to Africa on a mission trip. "I watched several hundred people commit their life to Christ and just experience the livelihood they lead. It was amazing," shared Johnson.

Soaking up the California sun, sophomore brothers Chris and Nathan Degen show off their new board while on their family vacation this past summer. "We went down to Pismo Beach to surf. Surfing was definitely the most fun part of the entire trip," shared Nathan. The Degen brothers were one of many students who visited the Sunshine State this summer.

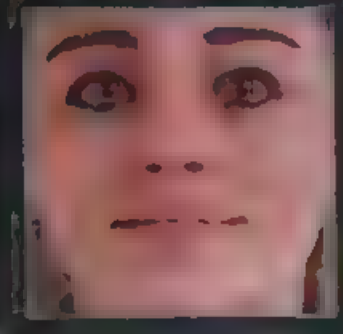

While hanging out with some of the natives of Thailand, senior Michael Ivison and his newly found friends stop to pose for a picture. Ivison spent his time in Thailand "informing the people and Thailand of the good news about Jesus Christ." While on his trip, Ivison also worked to rebuild people's houses after the devastating tsunami destroyed many of the villages two years ago.

RIGHT All snuggled up, Bailey Fitzhugh and Bandit, her pet quadimundi, have been together for about two months. "I like my pet because it's somewhat like a regular pet, but it's a lot more interesting to have," commented Fitzhugh. Fitzhugh acquired Bandit at the pet store, Pet-O-Rama in Mansfield, which imported Bandit from South America.

FAR RIGHT With extreme devotion, sophomore Sabrina Williams helps out at Petco for an annual adoption day. Her immense love of animals motivated Williams to volunteer her weekends at the Angel Rescue of North Texas Animal Shelter. "I enjoy it and haven't missed a day unless I was dying," expressed Williams.

Hughes bought him at Trader's Village two and a half years ago. Pockit is fed a special diet of fruits, vegetables, and a mixture of raisins, dry oatmeal, and cat chow.

Creative with a needle, Brittany Moore shows off her talent in design by creating cute costumes for the dogs she loves so much. "My animals are my babies; they fill my life with joy, and my hobby involves making clothes and dressing my babies," explained Moore. She plans to continue creating the mini costumes in her spare time and even sees potential in starting her own pet clothing line with the increasing popularity and demand. Brittany would sell her outfits for $45 each.

loving adorable animals

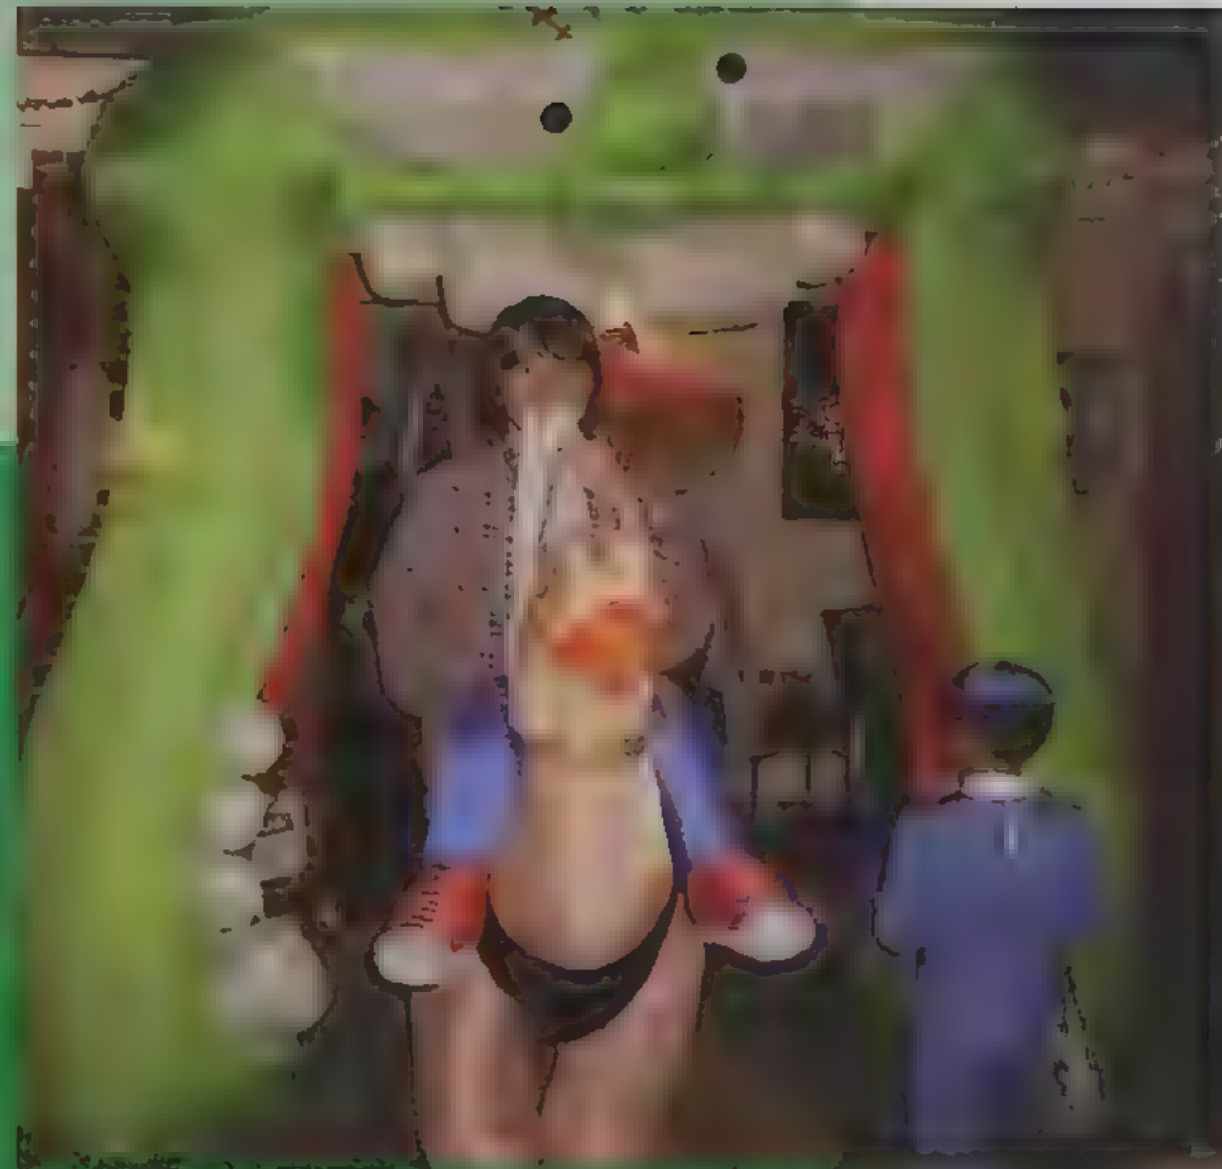

Pets play an important role in students' lives

Pets are an important part of our lives because they provide unconditional love and comfort. Two of our KHS students have devoted their lives towards helping out the animals they love. Senior Destini Hughes has been surrounded by a multitude of pets, including her two parrots Yin and Yang, an akita named Bull, Hercules a rottweiler, and her favorite pet, a sugar glider named Pockit, for as long as she can remember. Because of her intense love for animals, Hughes intends to devote her life to treating the sick and injured as a veterinarian. "My parents are very supportive no matter what school I go to, or what choices I make," said Hughes. She plans on going to Louisiana State University (LSU), where she can study animal infantry, physics, and animal classics, while possibly pursuing a career as a professional basketball player. "This school combines both of the things I love which is why I chose it," explained Hughes. Another animal lover, sophomore Sabrina Williams, selflessly volunteers her weekends at The Angel Rescue of North Texas Shelter. For the past two years Williams has spent every weekend at the shelter or helping out with adoption days at Petco. She even adopted Sunny, a four year old blue Siberian husky. Williams will take home new born puppies that are too young to stay at the shelter, and raise them until they are old enough to be adopted. "One of my favorite memories at the shelter was when I got to hold twelve newborn puppies," said Williams. These, as well as other, caring students have decided to devote their lives to improving the lives of the animals they love.

RIGHT In over his head, junior Stephen Miller gets help styling his new hair-do from senior Jena Burger. The two friends dressed up as each other for Halloween. Miller went as a female soccer player and Burger went simply as Stephen. "Stephen isn't any bigger than me so it was really confusing when I put on his clothes and they were huge," commented Burger.

FAR RIGHT Riding in style, senior Jimmy Wood comes back from a house with a handful of delicious candy. "Walking around all night can be really tiring. That is why I chose to ride around on an ostrich all night," shared Wood. Wood's ostrich costume was a favorite of the night and often was rewarded with extra candy.

spooks, scares, & sweets

Students savor memories of the sweet and scary night

There is no such thing as too old! We may be in high school, some of us may even be ready to graduate, but you're going to be hard pressed to find a Wildcat not excited for Halloween. Whether we were swarming the streets going door to door in the pursuit of candy or hanging out with friends at one of the many holiday parties, the Wildcats embraced the season with gusto. We loved dressing up in silly or elaborate costumes; it reminded everyone around us that teenagers can still have fun too. Some of us chose the standard ghost or witch costumes while others used their imaginations to create grapes or life like zombies. Candy lovers looked forward to all the sweets they would have at the end of the night, "Trick-or-treating is great 'cause I can tool around in some crazy get up and strangers give me candy!" said senior Jimmy Wood. If we didn't trick-or-treat, many had the option of attending a crazy or spooky Halloween party thrown by friends or family. Watching scary movies, eating "unknown" food, and dressing up were all great ways of spending the holiday. For the weekends approaching Halloween, a new attraction came to Kennedale to celebrate the holiday. Texas Scaregrounds, comprised of 4 different haunted houses on 12 acres of land, provided entertainment and screams for many students, as well as volunteer opportunities. Several students volunteered to become zombies, dead people, or characters from movies (like The Ring). No matter how each of us celebrated the night, we were glad for the excuse to dress up, have parties, and get candy with our friends.

Halloween can be a dangerous time, especially when your part-time job has you cooped up with psychos like Michael Myers. Despite the risk, junior Britney Zurovetz jumped at the chance to do a little community service scaring unsuspecting people out of their wits at Chaos haunted house. It's people like this that really come together to make Halloween the best time of the year.

Relaxing after their shift in the haunted house, sophomore Samantha White and freshman Clint Anderson take a minute to show off their scary costumes. Looking that good and still scaring people silly couldn't have been easy. Great costumes really are the heart of any good Halloween, especially when your job is to scare people.

FACT

The first recorded Halloween celebration was in 1921. Since then, the popularity of this holiday has grown with tens of millions of trick-or-treaters each year. 53% of the student body at KHS still trick-or-treats.

Most classes look forward to the day they leave high school and enter the "real world." It was no different for the Class of 2008 who graduated on June 6, 2008 at the Fort Worth Convention Center. This year's graduating class formed a close bond over the years. The salutatorian and valedictorian's, Mandy Seremet and Kayla Carnagie respectively, speeches represented this trait. Seremet ended her speech about the classes' success and encouragement of each other abruptly, in the middle of a thought. Everyone was surprised until Carnagie came up and completed the speech, continuing with thoughts about support systems and the fact that, "the world can achieve the kind of success we have. The kind where we may not be able to finish each other's sentences, but we can finish each other's speeches." The speeches also brought a surprise for several students graduating. In each speech various members of the Class of 2008 were mentioned for their accomplishments or for the things they do to make an impact on their fellow classmates' lives. This year marked a first for KHS graduation ceremonies in a few ways. One is that the ceremony was moved to a bigger location, "I loved it. There was plenty of room and it was super nice," said graduate Kristin Maniord, and secondly a guest speaker was on hand to encourage the graduates. Every graduate had a favorite part, for Kelli Grimes it was "moving my tassel over and throwing my hat," for Ryan Petry it was "walking across the stage." No matter what the most exciting part was, each graduate felt accomplished by completing high school.

Success

Surprises and new traditions start with graduating Class of 2008

Turning their tassels, the Class of 2008 happily becomes the newest set of graduates from Kennedale High School. This tradition was one of the most exciting parts of graduation for many graduates. Being able to turn their tassels made the each graduate finally feel like they officially completed high school.

Fighting through nerves, valedictorian Kayla Carnegie completes her speech addressed to her fellow classmates. Giving the speech about passing on encouragement to others was one of the most nerve-racking things Carnegie had ever done, "when I found out I would be making a speech, I got so nervous. I didn't think I could do it, but everyone around me gave me so much support, I made it!"

Concentrating on the memories made and those in the future, graduates Victoria Autrey and John Avila listen to the various speakers in the ceremony. Many graduates enjoyed the ceremony, but could not focus all their attention on each part. From reminiscing to is it almost over to is this really happening floated through each graduates mind, making it impossible to give their undivided attention.

LEFT With the final phrases of the Alma Mater hanging in the air, the Class of 2008 gets ready to throw their caps. For many graduates, there were mixed feelings at the end of their graduation, "singing the Alma Mater was bittersweet; I was happy to be moving on with my life, but sad because those singing with me, I might never see them again. But I kept thinking about all the good times I've had with them."

ABOVE Encouraging her classmates, salutatorian Mandy Seremet continues her speech about how successful her class has been. "It was neat because I got to brag on our class and we don't brag on ourselves very often. I also liked recognizing people who aren't ever recognized," said Seremet. The twist on her speech, with Kayla Carnegie, was also a favorite part of Seremet's speech, "It had never been done before. It was a lot of fun."

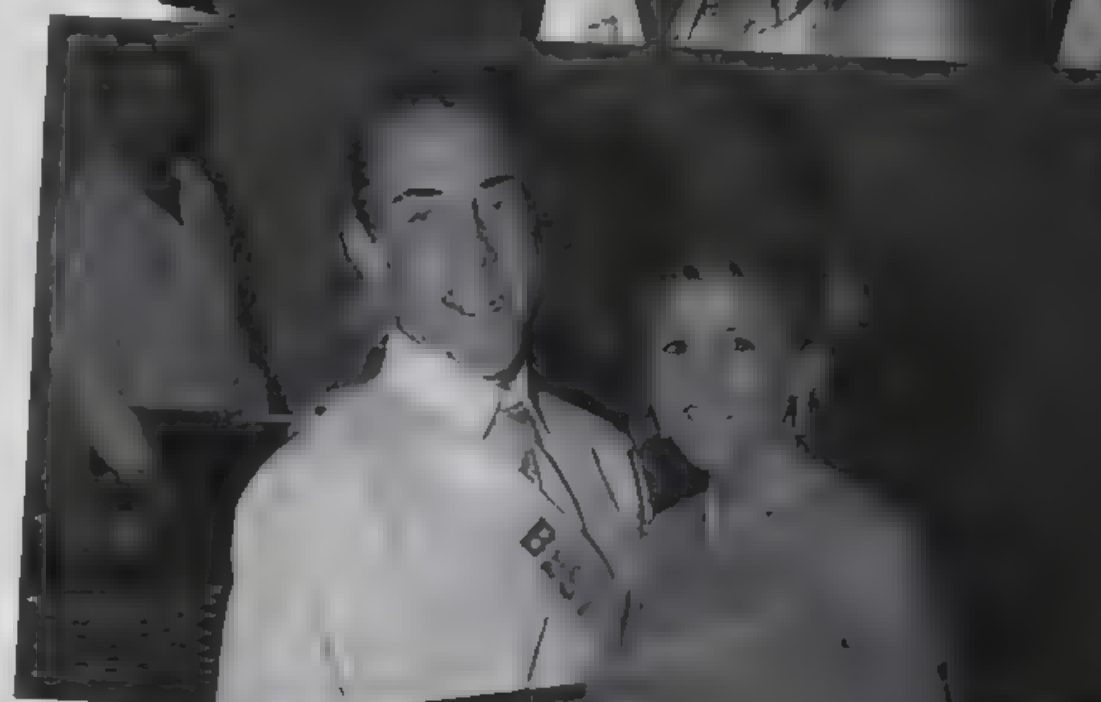

All lined up, senior friends Kelli Grimes, Amanda Mantooth, Hannah Anderson, Kelsey Kayser, Kayla Carnagie, Marissa Ericson, Mandy Seremet, and Kallie Newman stop for a moment to take a group photo. "I enjoyed prom a lot more this year than last year because I really got to spend time with my friends," shared Carnagie. The time spent with friends at prom, getting to dress up, was a source of fun for many who attended.

deep blue enchantment

Old and new elements join together for a mystical prom

Spending a memorable evening under the sea at the Worthington in Fort Worth was planned for May 3. This year's prom was "Deep Blue Enchantment," a mixture of mystery and nautical elements which made for spectacular moments for many in attendance. Prom was a huge success and Prom Chair, senior Mandy Seremet, as well as everyone else, enjoyed it immensely, "Actually seeing it all come together and everyone having a good time at something I created from the ground up was amazing." The work and hours put in deciding what the theme should be, what decorations to include (like a massive ship), what food to serve, what lighting should be used, and putting together the various items together were worth it when it was all completed. Students and their dates spent time at prom dancing, singing, relaxing, and eating at tables with fish bowls as centerpieces. This year prom included the traditional king and queen; however, more titles were awarded this year. Most Unique was given to Claire Pritchett and Ryan Watson, Best Dressed to Macey Cantrell and Benny Woodard, Cutest Couple to Ashley Bringol and Jason Yeley, and Most Transformed to Kayla Carnagie and Landon Lee. The honor of Prom King was given to Kody Kane and his Queen was girlfriend Erin Hunt. The two shared a dance together while onlookers continued to enjoy their evening. After the prom, many students chose to attend After Prom hosted by the PTA at Alley Cats where they enjoyed bowling, laser tag, arcade games, and much more with their friends and dates.

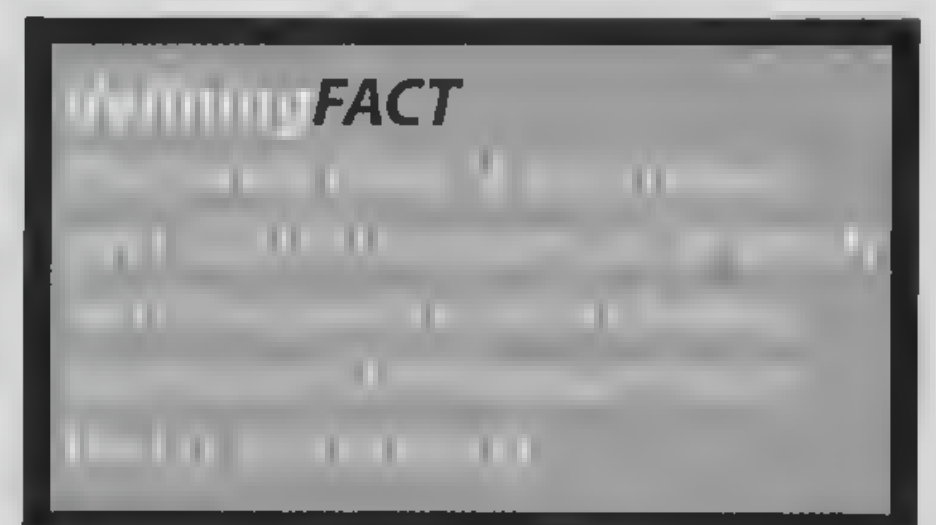

Spending some quality time together, seniors Matt Linguist, Melanie King, Bailey Turner, Valerie Morgan, and Alicia Underwood, gather around. The group of friends helped with some of the prom decisions on various Thursday and had looked forward to a great night, which ended up coming true Enjoying their moment in the spotlight, senior couple Kody Kane and Erin Hunt spend a dance in each other's arms as the newly crowned Prom King and Queen. "I was really surprised because I didn't even think about that, I was focused on the actual prom going as an officer," commented Hunt. Sharing this once-in-a-lifetime moment with each other was a highlight for both Kane and Hunt.

Goofing around, senior best friends Taryn Smith and Cindy Vu pose for a fun picture at prom. Creating many special memories with their special someone or their best friends is something that many seniors looked forward to at prom. For many it was one of the last events they attended as KHS students

Dee has been on the debate team for three years, and enjoys the opportunity of practicing his speaking skills, while getting prepared for his future career. "I want to become a lawyer one day, so both hobbies intertwine." Despite the tense environment when debating, Barksdale has also experienced fun moments. "When I was cross examining someone at the podium during a debate, I was flipping my pencil and it hit my friend accidentally in the head," he remarked. Dee plans on continuing this hobby next year, and will eventually pursue his future career after college.

Britney Zurovetz

Not only does school take up a part of her life, but singing shares a place in her heart. From performing "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" at the age of two in her backyard, to singing in front of many in the high school talent show, she has aspired to greater accomplishments. "Ever since I saw the first season of 'American Idol,' I knew when I wanted to try out for it when I became old enough." She auditioned for the seventh season in Dallas on August 4th. Surrounded by the crazy and weird crowd, she did not let her nerves win. "I was a little nervous, but when it was finally my turn to audition, I just let loose." Singing About You by Zoe Girl, Britney did not advance because the judges, surprisingly, criticized her attire. "They said I dressed too preppy to advance and actually see Paula, Simon, and Randy in the third round. The guy judge for the preliminaries was nice, but the girl was not. She was the one who didn't like my clothes." With that obstacle, Britney will not let her dream be crushed. "I plan on auditioning the next season and prove that I have what it takes to be the next American Idol."

Bryan McKissick

A.K.A B-Mac

Bryan is a fun and influential guy. He has tons of friends, which he credits to his fair and respectful personality. He is known throughout the school by his favorite nickname:

B-Mac. Actively involved in the school, Bryan plays on the baseball team; "It's my only real hobby," quoted McKissick. He also enjoys the quality time he spends with his buddies. "I dressed up as a cheerleader for Halloween with my friends; it was pretty fun, although I felt a little goofy," McKissick reminisced. When asked why they did it, Nathan Degen, a friend of Bryan's since seventh grade, had this to say, "It was a long time dream of ours because we were so used to being football players, so we wanted to switch it up. It made us feel sexy." In short, Bryan is loved by just about the whole of the student body (especially us smores!) Thank you Bryan for being the great person you are!

defining PERSONALITY

Da Jan Cooper

Da Jan describes himself as very outgoing, funny, and freakishly tall. He is the only freshman on the Kennedale Varsity basketball team. Coach Groff quoted, "He made six rebounds and six baskets with limited playing time in the six games he played." He is very close to his family. Some of his fellow classmates might say he sleeps in class. His best friend Jeremy Brown, stated, "He is like a little brother to me but is taller than me. Da Jan is so goofy off the court, but when we are on the court he is so serious. We are always laughing and cracking jokes." Da Jan can be very shy when he first meets you, but after he gets to know you, his true personality comes out.

Mrs. Sherri Wade

Sherri Wade always knew she wanted to become a teacher since she began taking roll and handing out papers with her dolls when she was a child. She has been teaching at Kennedale High School for three years and enjoys every minute of being around teenagers. "Even though I'm the teacher, I love learning from my students. I can't believe they pay me to do this," she commented. Mrs. Wade loves gardening, spending time with her husband, traveling, and reading until she begins finding mistakes in the passages; she even plays the cello! Her amiable personality and welcoming smile create a positive atmosphere in Kennedale that makes many students smile. "You don't have to make straight A's to be a good student. This is just the beginning, so hang on because great things are waiting for you," Mrs. Wade remarked. Her hard work and dedication to her students and fellow teachers makes her a great asset to Kennedale's staff!

competing with intensity

A sport can be one of the most defining activities in which to participate during high school. A member must be passionate about the sport that they have chosen in order to be successful. These sports become part of our identities just like our grades or our cars. By participating in our selected sport, or sports, we add another piece to the puzzle of who we are. By participating in sports at Kennedale, we become a Wildcat or a Lady Kat that is part of a winning, driven, and loyal group of athletes dedicated to becoming the definition of success. Each of our programs has risen to the occasion and are becoming better and better. We are not a team that others take lightly. Our opponents must come prepared to fight; otherwise they stand no chance. We have become strong and worthy over the years and have created a fierce identity in our sports teams. With each game we define the Kennedale Wildcats as a force to be reckoned with; we dominate when we are at our best. Our athletic facilities are getting a facelift with a bigger and more sophisticated stadium and a new field house that will help give athletes confidence in their school and in themselves. This confidence is not only on the individual level, but as a team as well. Each of our teams at Kennedale has strived to become the best team in our school history. Total dedication and love of the game, along with the pride of being a Wildcat, has led each of us to our personal and team goals. Who couldn't be happy when they look back at the scores from our athletes? It is hard not to be proud of the identity that the athletes have created; one of dedication, strength, confidence, loyalty, and perseverance. Each sport had that one "Defining Athlete" that exemplified values of leadership, effort, and determination and had a positive impact on their team or season. This year we worked hard to become #1 in all that we did; and we accomplished that, if not in the record books, then in the hearts of our teammates, coaches, fans, but most importantly, in ourselves. How are you defining yourself?

The smell of fresh turf on the Kennedale Wildcats' field, the elevating sound of the cheering audience, and the stimulating combination of band instruments set off a new season of America's all time favorite sport: football. Our team of vicious and competent players added yet another successful year to our scoreboard. While many of us were finishing up vacations in exotic places like Thailand, the boys began training on August 6, 2007. The practices consisted of "grueling 'two-a-days,' five hours a day of training for two weeks, lifting weights, repeating play after play, and slamming into each other in our pads," said senior Joey Lucero. Practices were, "long, tiring, and hard," according to senior Matt Fletcher, but they were also "very useful, both physically and mentally." "I coach as hard as I can because that's what you're required to do. I'm very proud of them because we overcame so much adversity," Coach Barrett commented about his diligent players. The team faced many injuries including those of key players Raphael Brooks, Cody Ostrout, and quarterback Logan Barrett. Barrett was injured in the rivalry game against Everman, which forced the team to, "get a new quarterback, Sean Fennel, who had to play two different positions. Then we had to replace his previous positions with other players, and everyone had to learn new things from scratch. We cooperated as a team to try and work everything out," senior R.B. Neely explained. The Wildcats' bond grew stronger as many of the senior varsity players gave it their all in their last year at Kennedale. "Even though we didn't go as far as we wanted to this season, it was still very unforgettable for me," senior Kody Kane said. Along with the team's chemistry and cooperation, the incredible guidance that coaches Barrett, Trantham, Gann, and many assistant coaches contributed to make this year victorious, is a valuable possession that Kennedale High School is thankful for.

Football teams cope with a year full of injuries

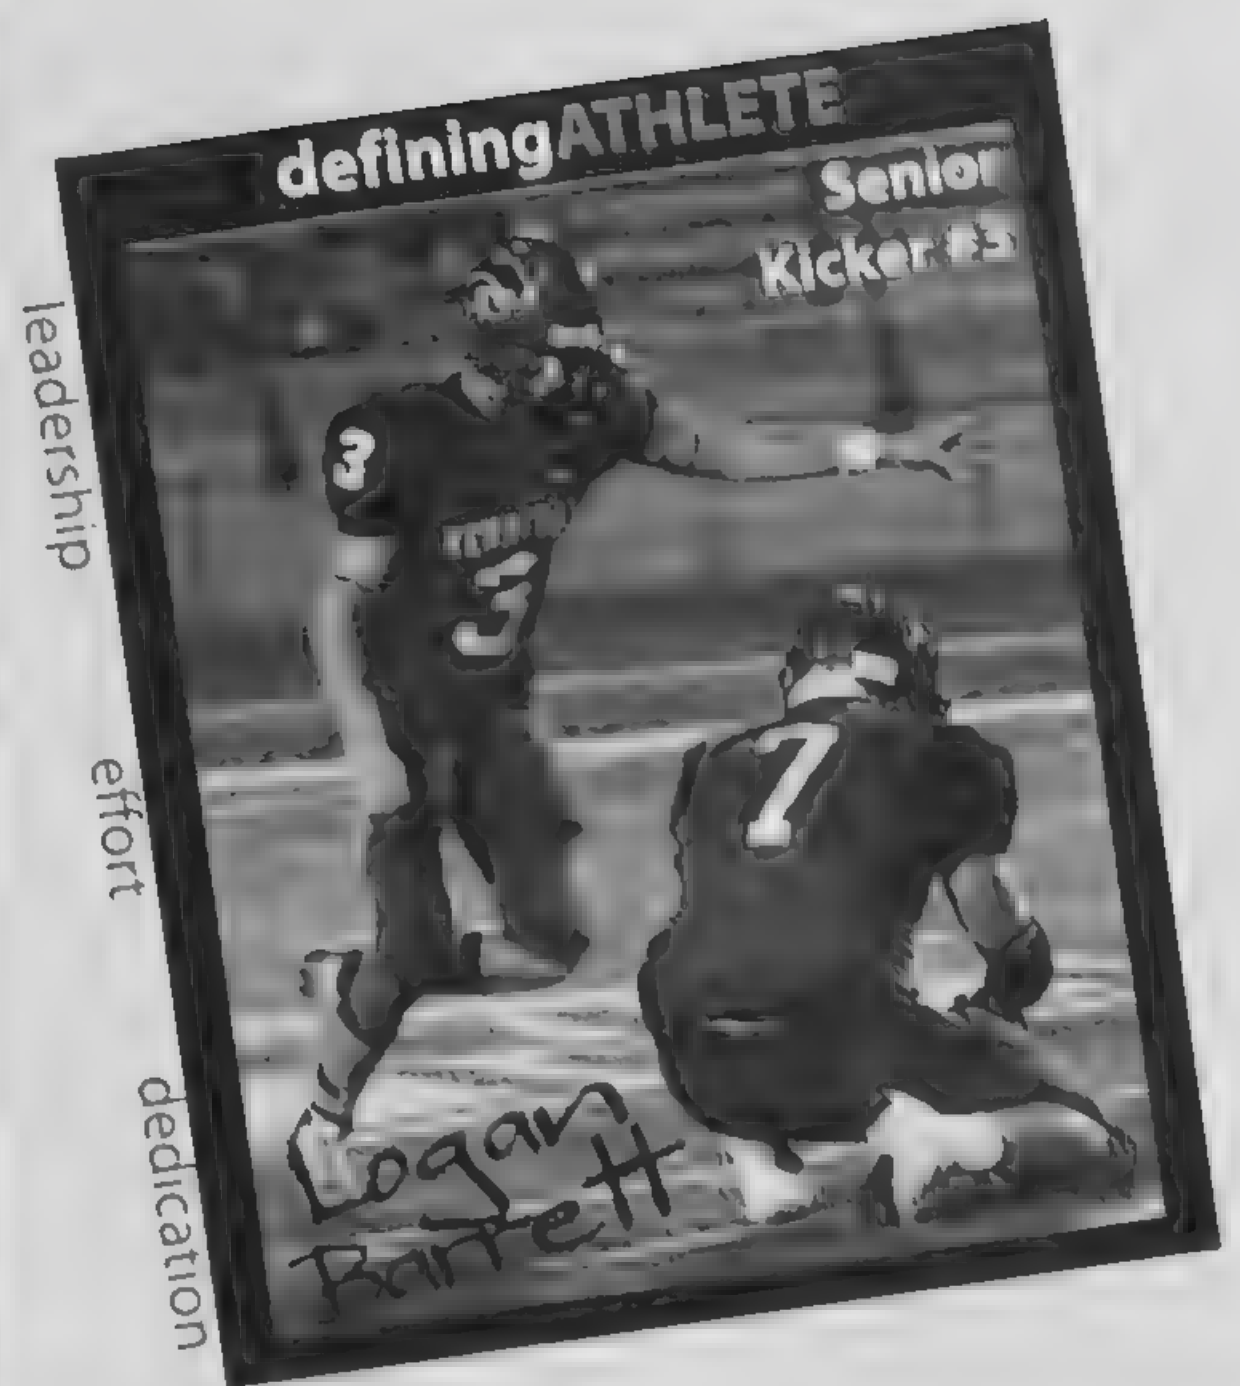

RIGHT In the air, senior Sean Fennel prepares to throw the ball down the field. Fennel commented, "I played as an underclassmen so I didn't have to learn anything new when they put me in as quarterback. I did more work on my arm because I hadn't thrown in so long." Fennel worked hard to become a successful Wildcat quarterback.

FAR RIGHT Shielding with aggression against the Azle Hornets, junior James Ray, #81, blocks the opponents from scoring a touchdown. "I love the competition and excitement that football puts me through. I listen to my iPod to get my adrenaline rushing," Ray commented. The Wildcats won the battle against the Hornets with a score of 52-24.

Running with determination, junior full back Aaron Wingfield takes control of the ball while a Whitney player chases after him. The team worked hard all season to be a success, and games like the one against Whitney proved that practice works. "The Homecoming game against Whitney was an easy win for us," Wingfield explained. The impressive Wildcats dominated in the game against Whitney with a score of 54-6.

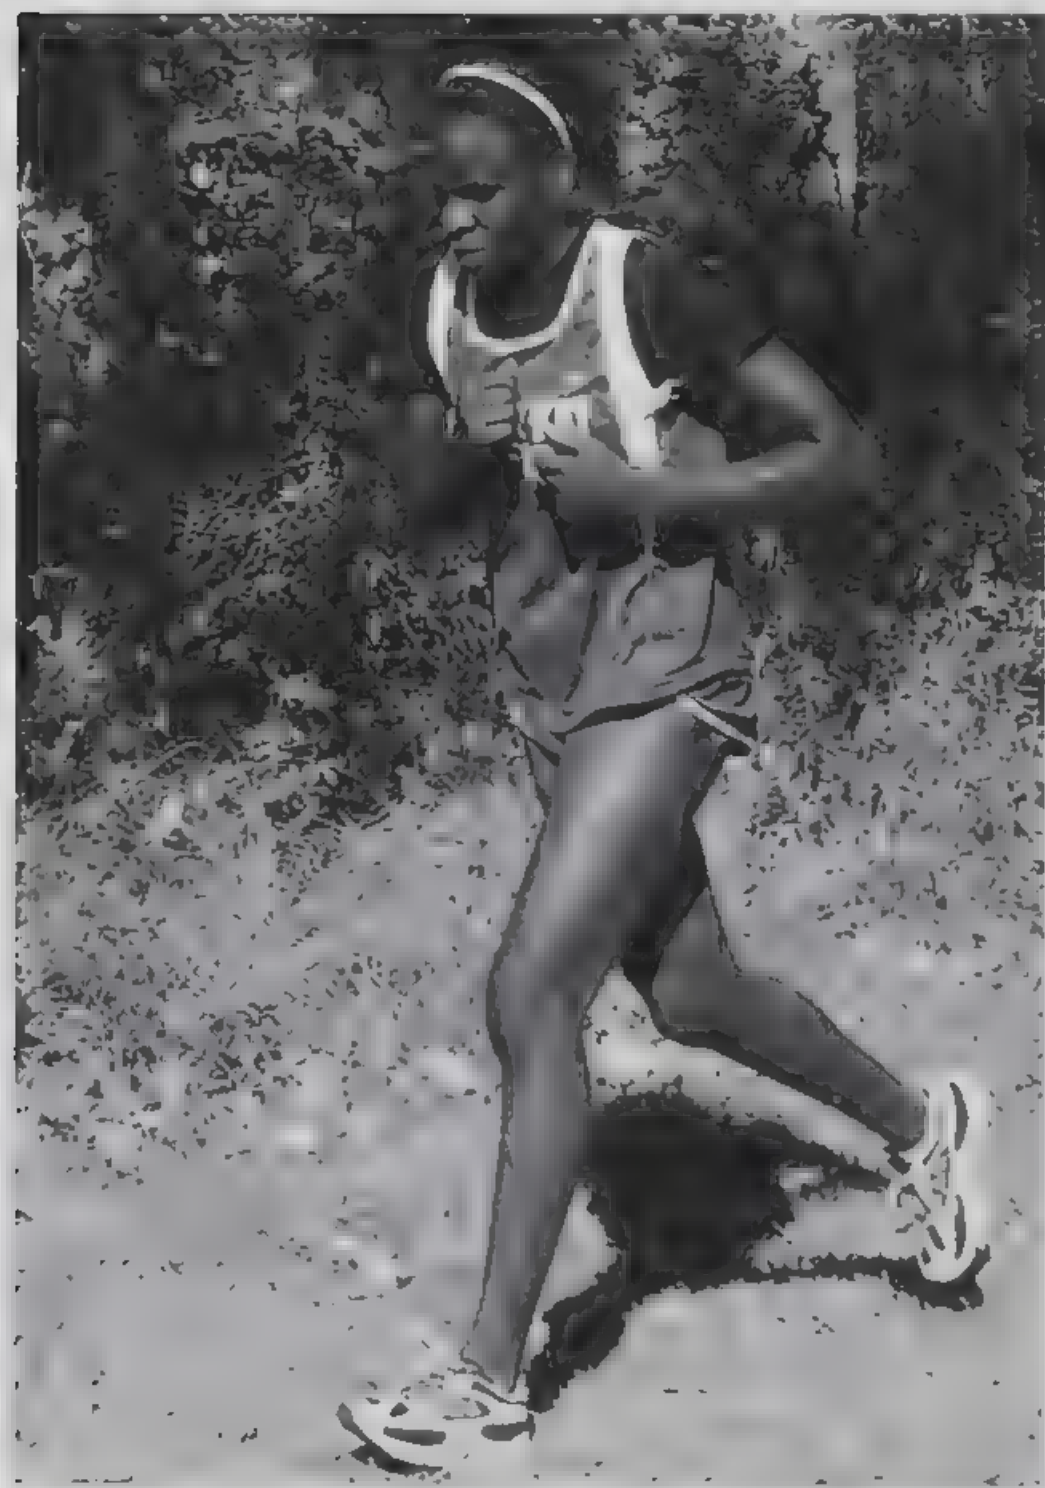

ABOVE Grasping the ball with all his might, senior wing back Kasib Williams tries to gain yards without receiving a tackle from Whitney's defense. "I like the position I play because I get to hit people when they're not looking. Even though we had many injuries this season, everything worked out pretty good," said Williams.

LEFT With the crowd roaring and anxiety pumping, tight end Cody White and offensive linemen Joseph Lucero and Raul Duran shield quarterback Sean Fennel from the pressure of the Whitney blitz. "That was the first game of district play, and we needed to send a message to our future opponents," Lucero said.

RIGHT Racing ahead of the pack, freshman Kayla Bay uses her adrenaline rush to push her through the race. "I love the feeling of running. It makes me feel like I'm flying which is pretty cool because I'm so short," said Bay. Cross country runners used their bursts of energy to soar away from the starting line and opponents.

BELOW Battling the heat, junior Gabrielle Lee uses her motivations to get to the finish line. "I don't eat before I run, so I imagine a large amount of food at the end of the track. I also drink a lot of Gatorade which pumps me up, and persuades me to get the crowd rowdy! It motivates me more when the crowd is cheering us on," Lee remarked.

With the deafening sound of the starting gun, the Kennedale boys sprint with determination to ensure a good start in the three-mile event. "The coaches motivated me to run, so I ran. And surprisingly, it's gotten me this far!" sophomore varsity runner Daniel Rico exclaimed. Rico ran the 3-mile race in an impressive time of 17:10 and placed 1st in the race.

LEFT One stride at a time, sophomore TJ Richards runs his best at the district meet. The influence of other sports assists many students in joining cross country. "I was in basketball last year and the coaches made me run to stay in shape for basketball season. This was an advantage for me because I'm already familiar with the workouts and training," Richards explained.

FAR LEFT While blocking out all distractions and concentrating on a victory, freshman Nick Cates and sophomore Sid Avanti aim to get ahead in the race. "After running three miles, it's hard to breath, and I feel like I could sleep for hours. But in the end, I know it's all worth it," commented Cates concerning the tough competition.

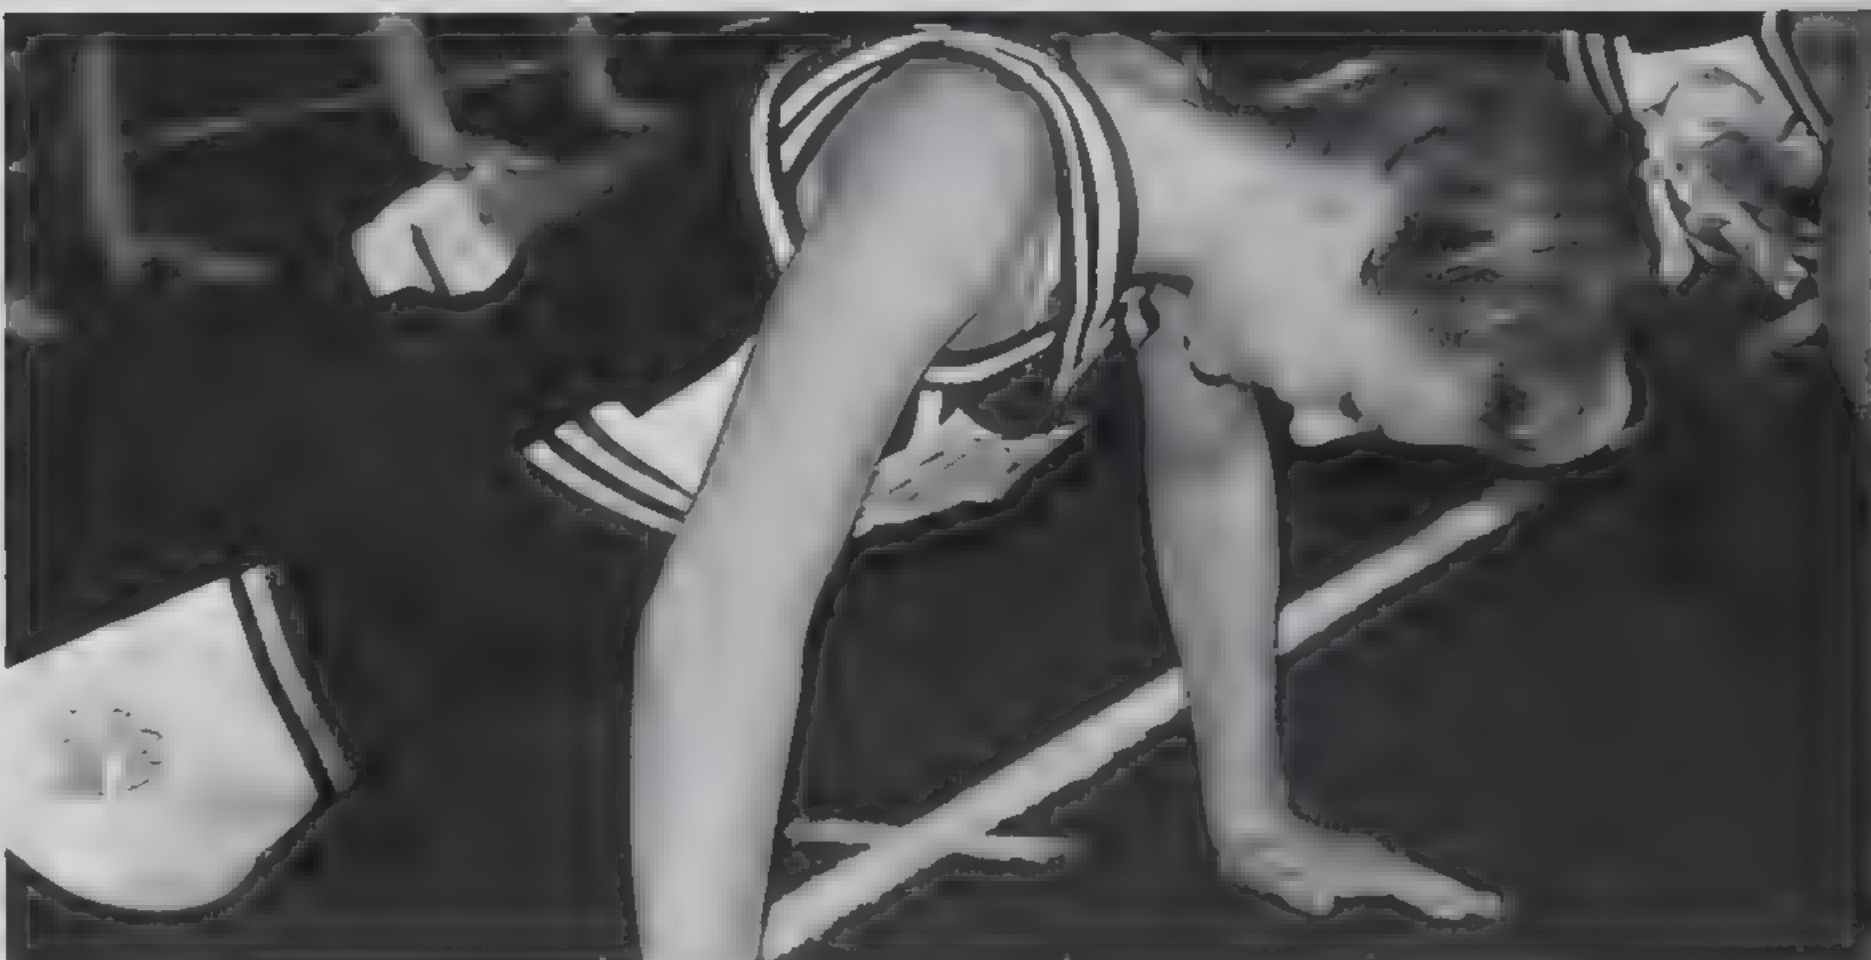

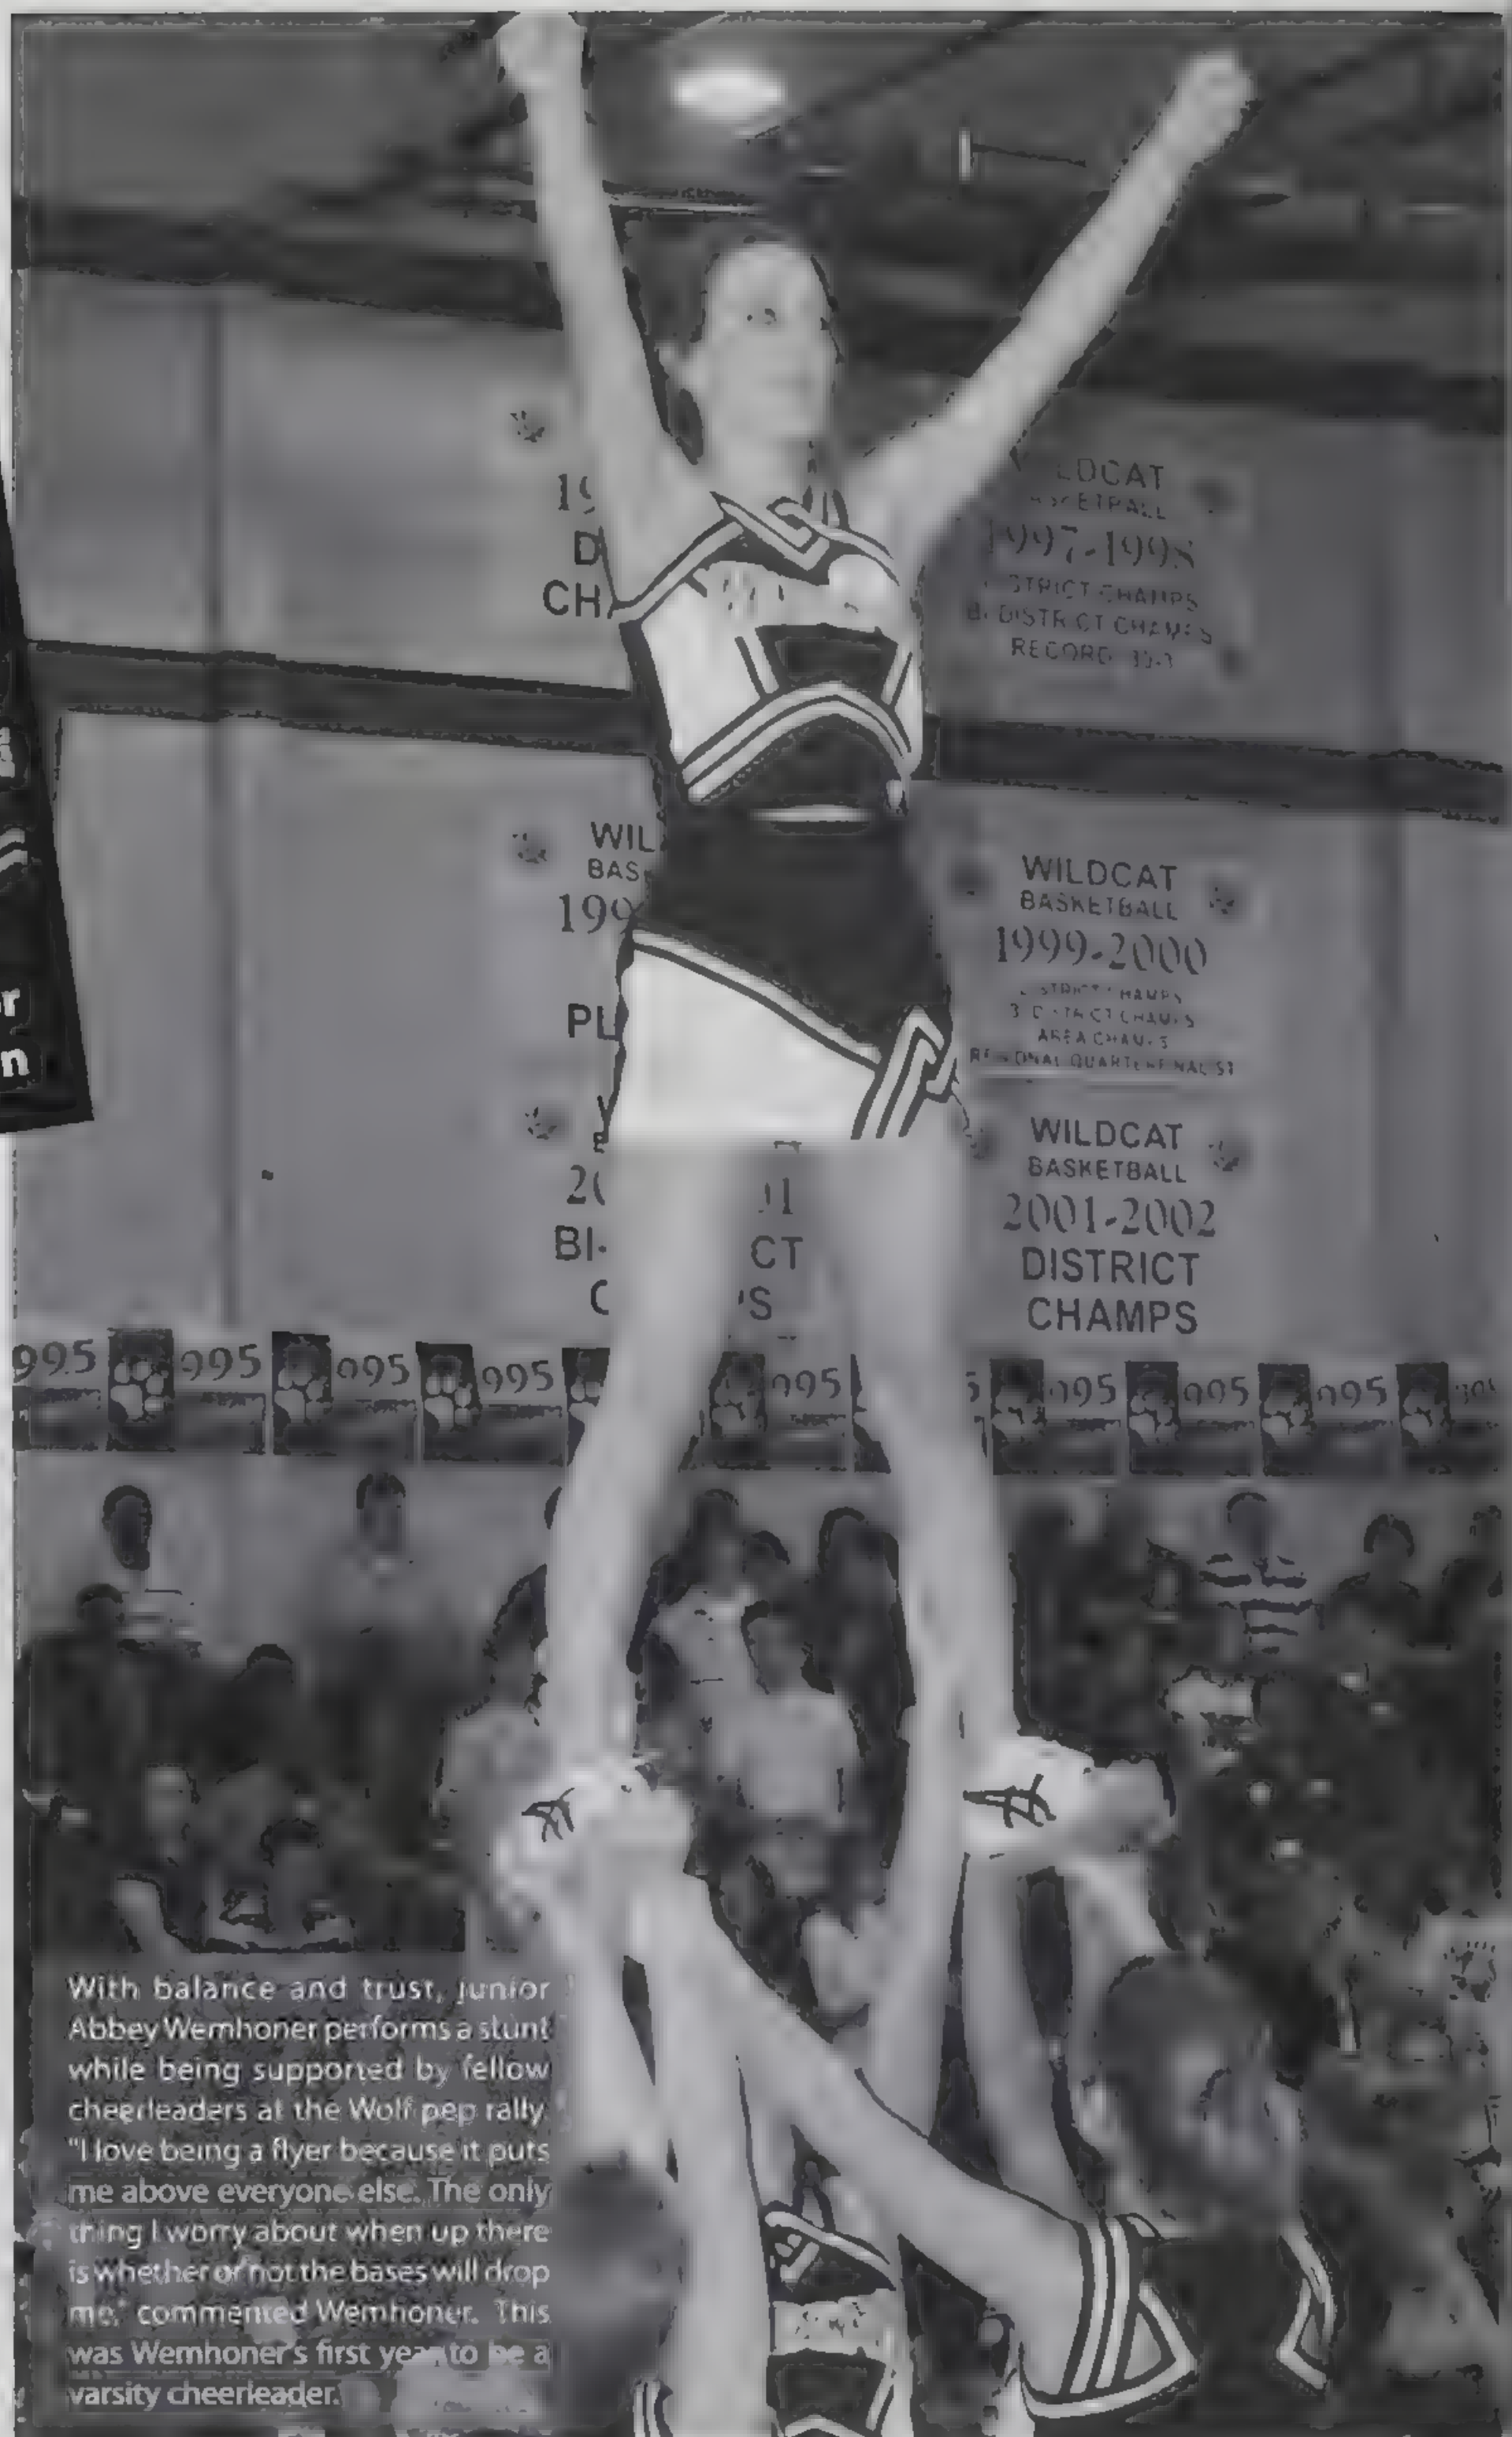

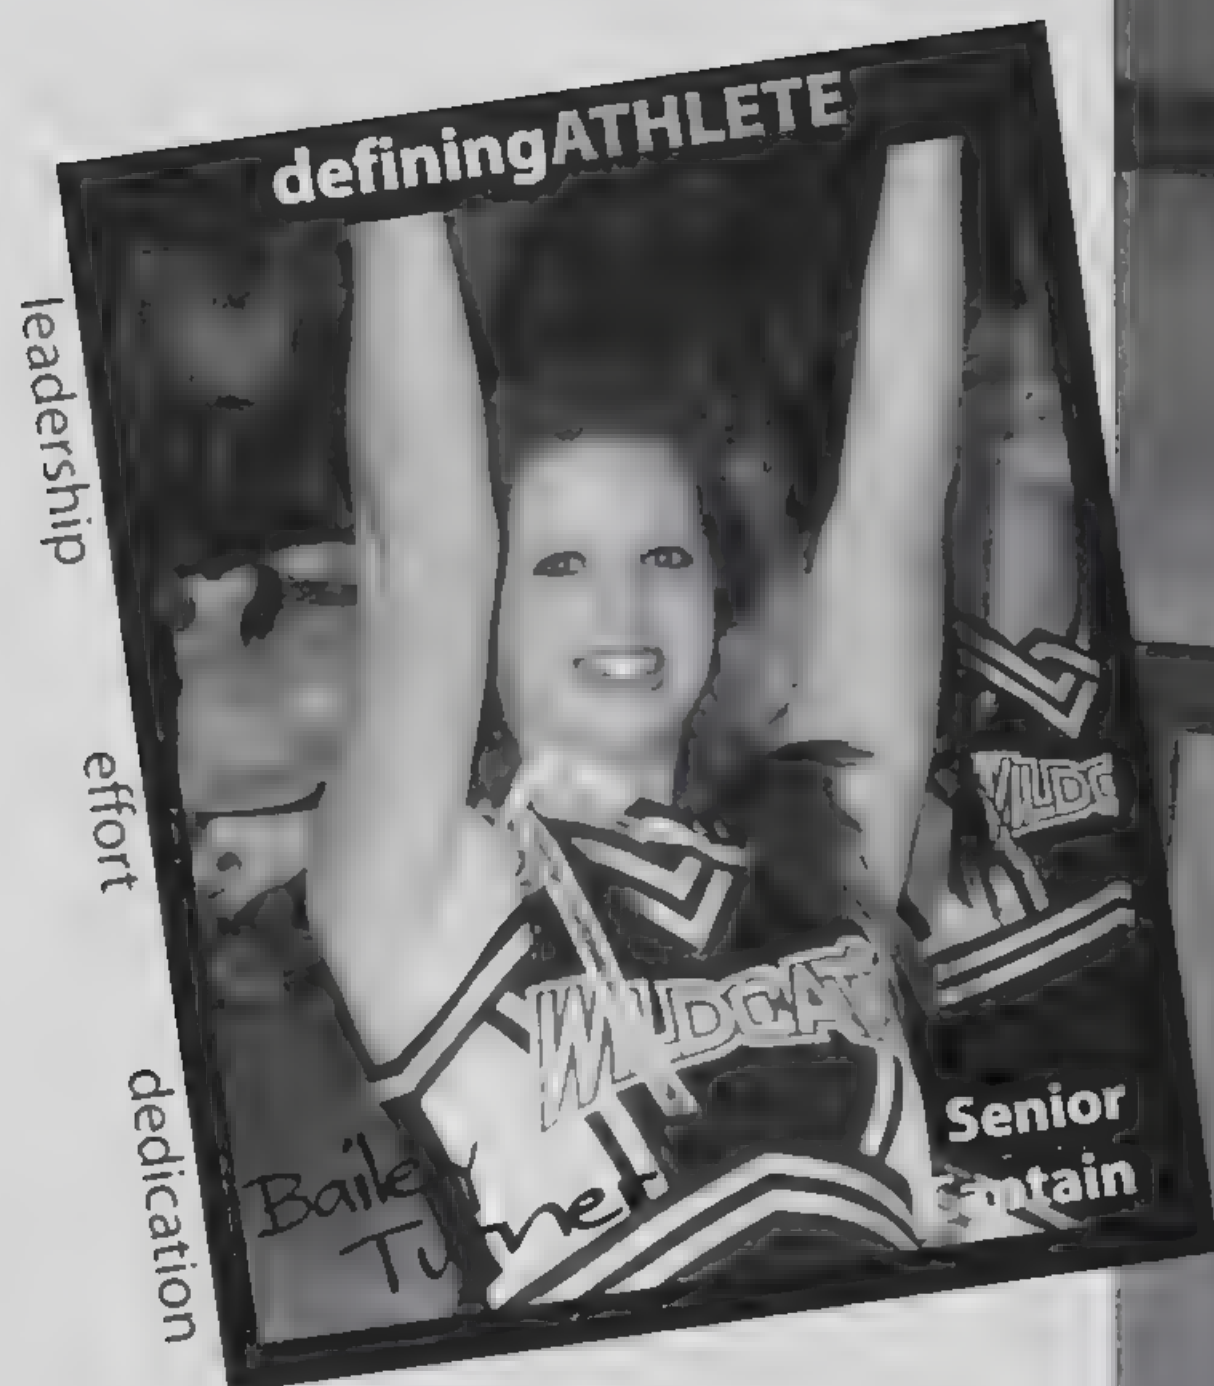

Setting the pace

Students train at extreme hours, temperatures to prepare for District

Self-discipline and determination contributed to the success of this year's cross country teams. Waking up at 5:45 a.m. to run was part of the strenuous training program put into place in order to compete at the District 12-3A meet. The teams also endured practices after school with temperatures nearing 100 degrees. When asked about the tough workouts, freshman Chelsea Dunn replied, "I like to go to practices because it's fun, and I like getting in shape." Working out with teammates and the drive for success both provided motivation to run effortlessly. The runners also grew closer, creating many cherished memories and excellent mile times. "This year is definitely better than last year's cross country team. Even though the boys didn't qualify as a group for Regionals, the girls unexpectedly succeeded to the next level of endurance," Coach Mindy Morris replied. Senior Ryan Petry also added, "I like this year because we had a new coach who pushed us harder, but at the same time it was beneficial to us." Sophomore Spencer Roznos also added, "The coaches are really inspiring. With the help of their guidance and a bottle of Gatorade by my side, I ran with all my might." In addition to the perseverance and hard work that the entire team put into their cross country season, Daniel Rico and Chelsea Dunn were applauded for their outstanding times which lead them to qualify for Regionals. This year couldn't have been completed without the drive and optimism that coaches Mindy Morris, Doug Groff, and Priscilla Smith brought to the team.

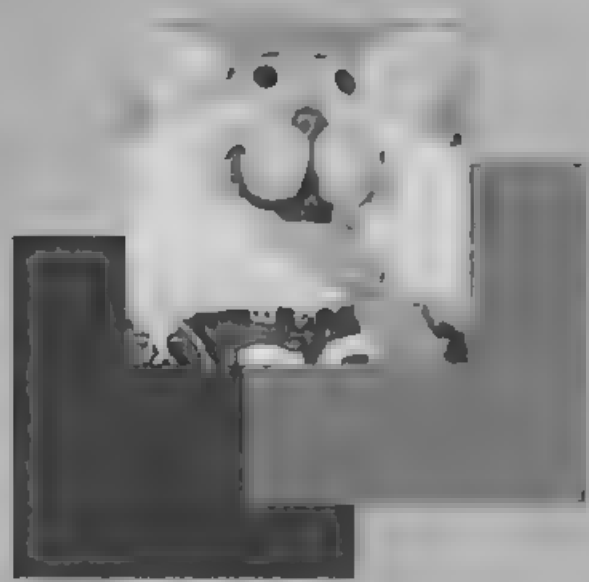

ABOVE Dancing with the band, juniors Alexis Stokes and Ashley Byers, and senior Elise Martinez pump up the crowd at a home game. "Cheering alongside the band makes me feel more involved. I feel as if I am down there on the field working with the football team for that win," shared Byers. At every home and away game, the cheerleaders could be spotted down on the side of the field cheering on their team.

RIGHT Showing her strength, senior Erin Hunt begins another set of push-ups. "We always do a set of push-ups for each touchdown the football team makes. It's our way of inspiring them by giving back to them their hard work. When they work hard to get those touchdowns, we work hard to reward them with our push-ups." This was a tradition the varsity cheerleaders take part in at every game, every year.

From camp in the summer, practice after school, decorating the gym, to cheering at games at night, the cheerleading squads were constantly working in an attempt to keep our school spirited. Did you ever walk by the gym on Friday mornings and wonder how the streamers, posters, and balloons appeared? It was thanks to the hard work and dedication put forth the night before. The cheerleaders put in hours of their time to stay after school and help decorate to make the school a little more spirited.

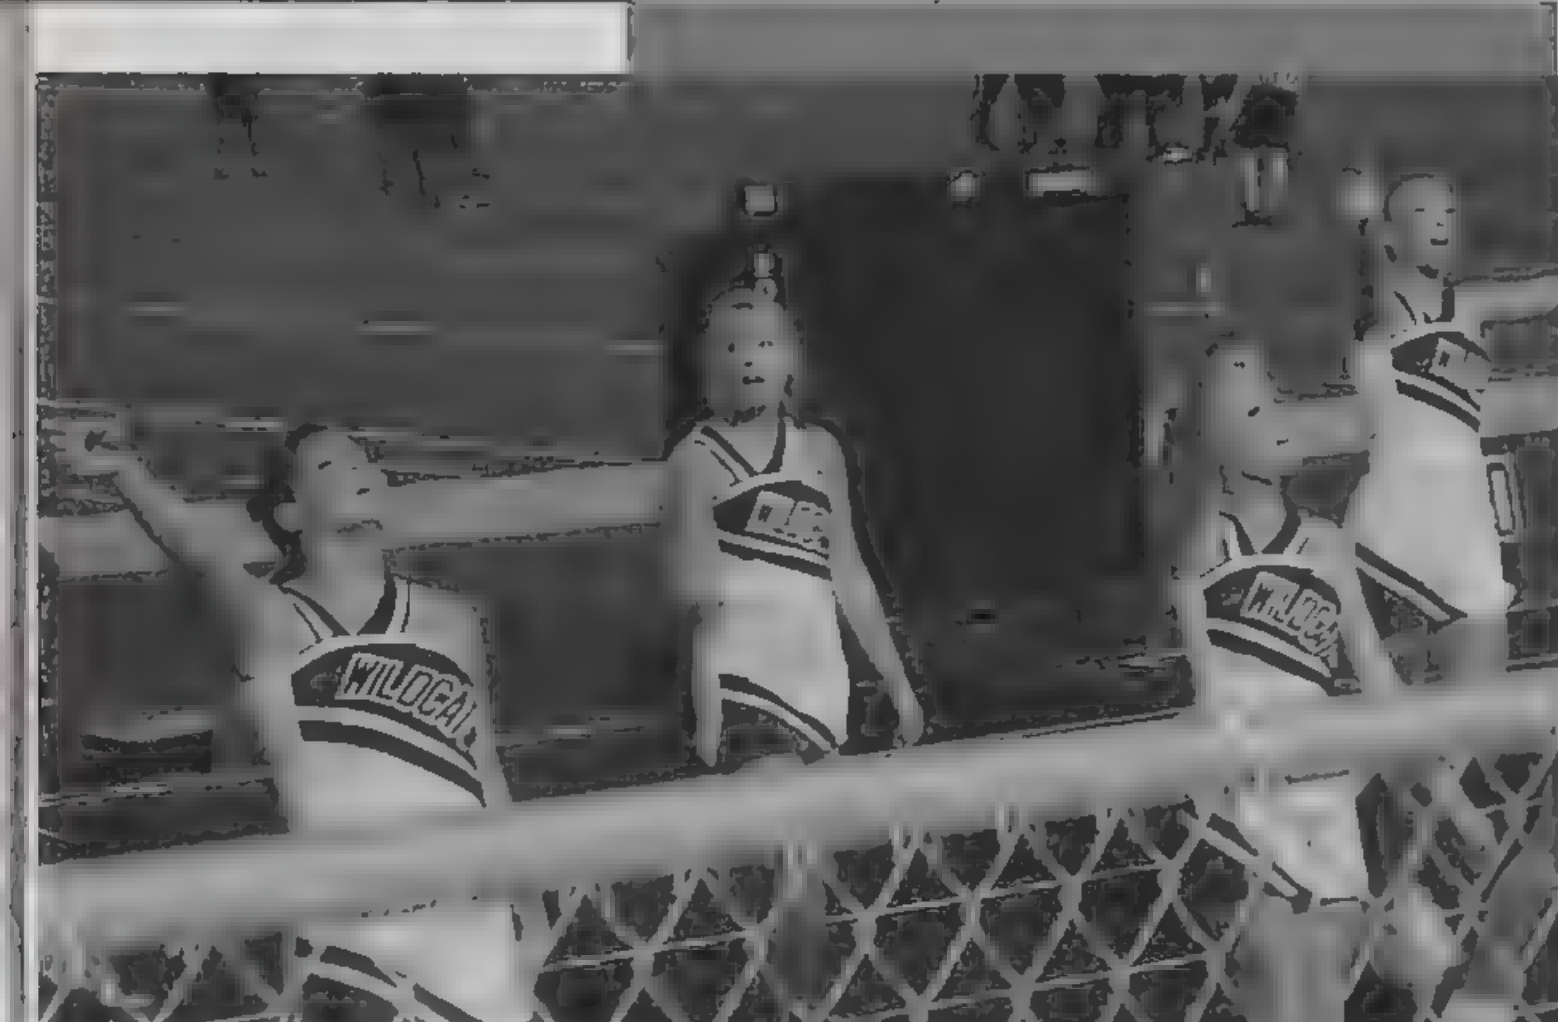

"My most memorable part of cheerleading was staying at the school until about one in the morning to decorate the gym for homecoming," shared senior captain Bailey Turner. This year, they worked two different fundraisers in order to afford the different themed pep rallies. The first fundraiser was held at the Cowtown Racetrack off of Dick Price Rd. in Kennedale and the second was a car wash held at Burger King on Sublett. Not only were their nights and weekends given up, but every Monday and Wednesday afternoon the cheerleaders had a strenuous two hour practice in which they practiced new stunts, jumps, and routines to be performed at Friday's pep rally. "Sometimes practices are fun because we learn new stunts and routines, but then other times it becomes a lot of work that is very stressful. Learning routines that quickly creates a lot frustration and it becomes very difficult," shared junior Britney Zurovetz. From fundraisers, to practice, to football and basketball games, and tryouts, cheerleading is an all-around extracurricular activity that proudly works hard to keep the school spirit alive and well.

Cheerleaders put forth time, energy to motivate fans

With spirited energy, sophomores Allie Esquivel, Lauren Woods, Bailey Fitzhugh, and Victoria Pearce, cheer alongside the crowd. "I love our fans at the JV and freshmen football games. They always yell for us and are very involved in supporting not only the football players, but us cheerleaders as well," commented sophomore Pearce. Crowd support was an imperative part in winning games.

This year the Lady Kats rose to perfection with strength and teamwork. They played with drive during their regular season with team captains Miranda Guzman and Sarah Schramme leading the team to victory after victory. Players and fans both got into the spirit of the game cheering as these talented ladies showed us their fighting spirit. Cries of "ACE" and inspirational chants lifting from "Team Loud", the girl's all-male cheer squad, could be heard throughout the school on game days, which contributed to the overall electricity of the matches. Not ones to let the pressure get to them, the Lady Kats played beautifully, with the experience of not just their captains, but seniors such as Simone Warner and Marissa Ericson tempering the raw talent exhibited by all the girls. Other area leaders Meagan Burgess, Lauren Woods, and Allie Esquivel exemplified Lady Kat ferocity as they tore into the opposition at every game. At the end of the season the girl's record was 8-2, and several of our players received district recognition; captain Miranda Guzman was named All-District M.V.P. and Sarah Schramme, Lauren Woods, and Meagan Burgess made 1st Team All-District, while Allie Esquivel and Marissa Ericson made 2nd Team All-District. Such success could not have been achieved without the diligence and hard work that all the girls put into their season, not to mention the many hours coaches Kim Padgett, Amie Kirkpatrick, and Jennifer Statum put towards the team. Notably, near the end of the season, our girls demolished the undefeated West Lady Trojans (who left the court in tears) and secured their spot in the playoffs. How could such a fantastic combination of talent, experience, and hard work lead to anything but victory?

Team aces regular season by reaching second round of playoffs

Working together to drive home the point, junior Sarah Schramme and sophomore Kate Cassell prepare for the perfect kill. "It is really important to make sure you set the ball correctly, otherwise it becomes even more difficult for your teammate to spike it over the net properly," shared Schramme. Outside of school, Schramme was selected to the Ace U-17 National team this year.

LEFT Always there to support the Lady Kats, Team Loud (left to right senior Ryan Petry, 2007 graduate Adam Sparling, and senior Ryan Watson) pumps up the crowd and really gets the fans moving. Their presence was felt at every game as they rocked the stands with their cheers and songs. Support from them and the rest of the Lady Kat fans really helped energize the girls on the court

ABOVE Poised at the ready, senior Simone Warner waits for the next incoming hit to fly over the net. Warner, as well as the other girls, needed to be fully focused on the game which meant blocking out all distractions. Playing well didn't just involve physical fitness, but a lot of intense concentration as well, so the girls were always alert for the opposition's next move

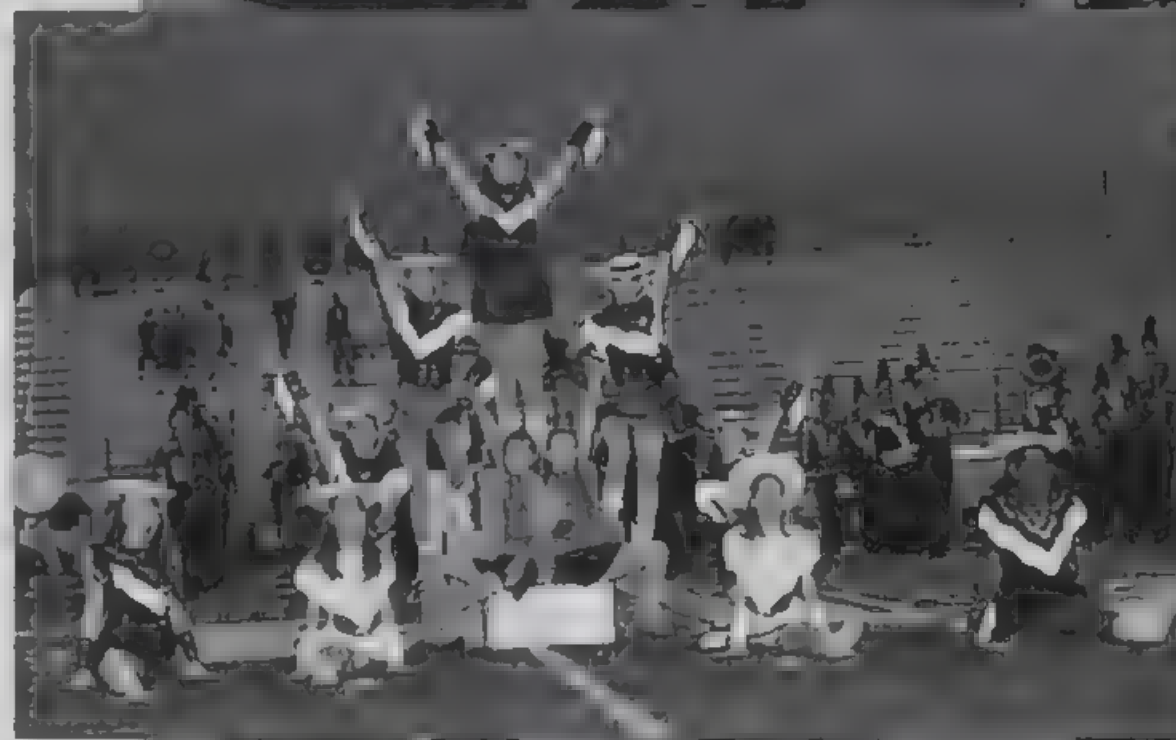

Dancing in unison, the Aristokats entertain the crowd with one of their many dance routines. "I love the technical parts of practice and the warm ups because we get to learn new things, but the hardest part is performing the routine over and over," commented senior Kristin Maniord. The team practiced long and hard after school to ensure that they are were as close to perfect as possible.

a year to rebuild

Aristokats comes together after loss of captain

This was a major rebuilding year for the Kennedale High School Drill Team. In addition to brand new uniforms they gained a number of girls and made plans to make the team even bigger and better than it has become. The team endured 2 1/2 hour practices every Monday through Thursday to perfect the routines they learned at a three day summer camp for both pep-rallies and games. The team was lead by new director Victoria Hatcher, sophomore lieutenants Amber and Samantha Pence, and junior captain Jordan Drake. "I enjoy teaching, and expanding knowledge to other girls," commented Hatcher. This year, the Drill Team suffered a very heavy loss when their captain, Drake, moved to Nebraska in early October, right in the middle of the season. "It was a tremendous loss, she was my right hand person," shared Hatcher. In her freshmen and sophomore years, Drake was a Line Member, but she worked hard so she could reach her goal of being team captain her junior year. Out of all the girls, Jordan received the highest score from the three professional judges at the Drill Team auditions, enabling her to become captain. "If it wasn't for everyone I wouldn't have pushed so hard," explained Drake. While the loss of their captain was hard, the team came together and worked even harder to overcome this obstacle. The girls made many memories and lasting connections through their many hours together and their work to overcome many setbacks. The Pence Lieutenants will lead the team to a competition in Galveston were they hope to win it for their former captain Jordan Drake.

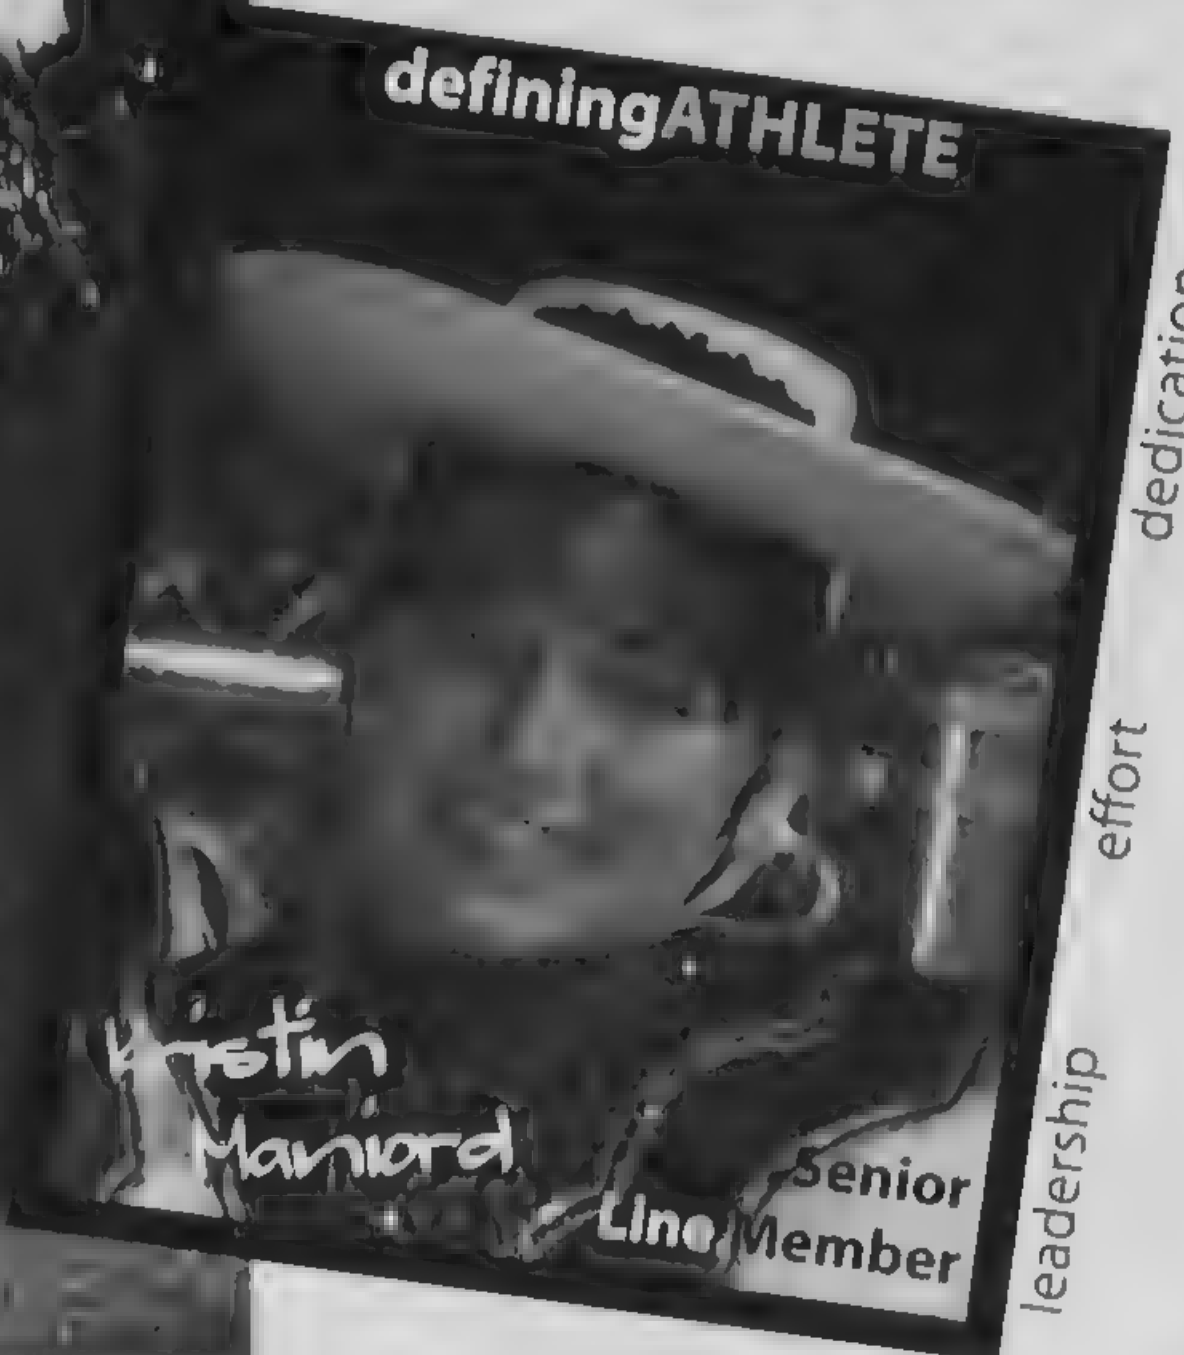

LEFT Excited beyond limits, the drill team and the Chick-fil A cows show their school spirit at the "Wake Up With the Wolf" pep-rally held on November 9th. "Dancing with the cows made the pep-rally very interesting because they were so funny," said junior Morgan Carnes. The drill team performed one of their routines in a display of school spirit at the Wolf pep rally in November BELOW Finishing with perfection, sophomore Natalie Parsons performs with her fellow teammates at a Friday night home game. The drill team always provided fans with an exciting routine at halftime at the football games. The girls loved the thrill of performing under the lights and look forward to more dancing next year. "I love being on drill team and will probably try out for officer next year," said Parsons.

With extreme poise, captain Jordan Drake leads the Astoria through their games during a varsity football game. "We're like a family, we argue just like family, but in the end we're all together," quoted Drake. "I moved away to Nebraska, but I'm still together."

Reaching for the goal, senior Destin Hughes leaps to toss the ball. Hughes was named MVP of the net along with numerous awards and recognition and continues to excel in his sport. LSU is proud of the team and I got to experience it all with them. Hughes' journey to State ABOVE Setting up in a defensive stance, senior Ashley Bringol prepares to take on an opponent from Whitney. "Defense is one of the main things that helped take us to State. Coach always said that if you play hard defense, the offense will come and it always did," shared Bringol. Bringol has played varsity basketball since she was a freshman.

RIGHT Coming together to regroup, the varsity girls huddle and reflect on what needs to be worked on. "Huddles help us calm down and think about what it is that we need to do in order to win the game," commented sophomore varsity player Morgan Spareman. Spareman helped the girls immensely during the final four playoff games.

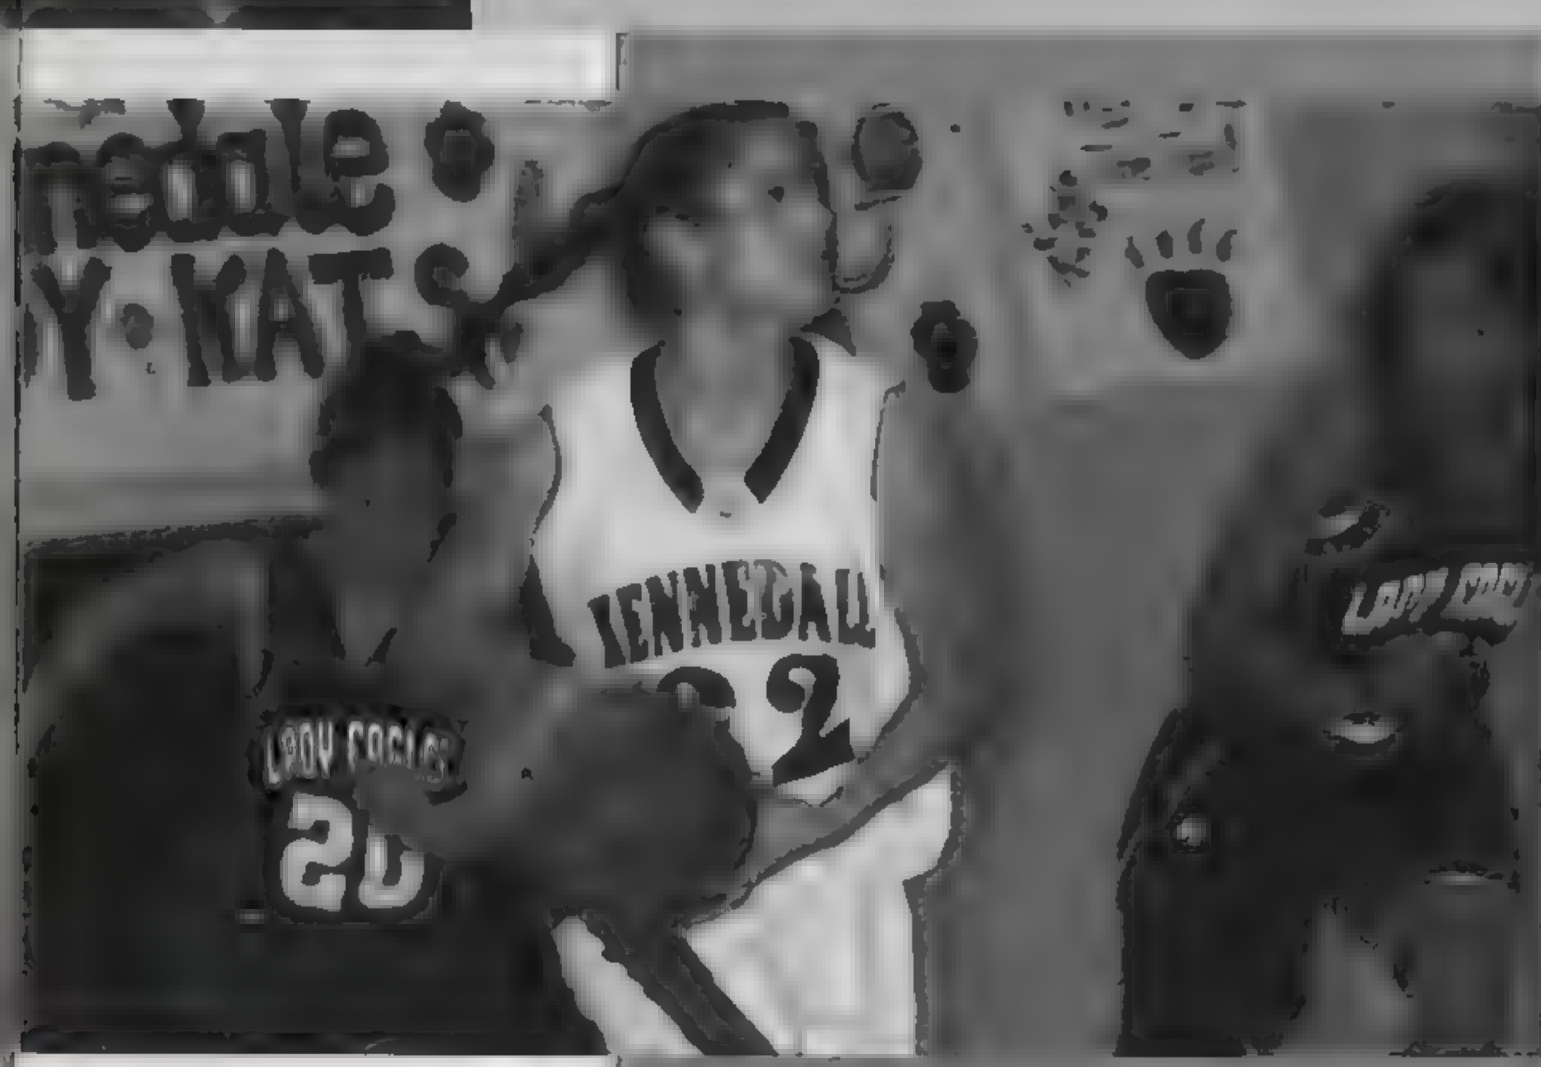

The girls' basketball team this year accomplished many seemingly impossible feats and broke many records for Kennedale throughout an amazing season. After a disheartening finish last year, the team took a vengeance to everyone in order to prove that they were going to win. "Last year we made it to the regional semi-finals and this year no one gave us credit for beating some of the top teams around, but we didn't let that stop us. It only gave us motivation to succeed," shared captain Destini Hughes. They started off dominating in district play with scores totaling up into the three digits against teams such as West and Whitney. This success lasted all the way through the regional games and on to the final four state tournament held at the Erwin Center in downtown Austin. This was the very first time a girls' basketball team from Kennedale had progressed all the way to the state finals. During the day before the game, the team was treated to a pep rally held in their honor not only from the high school, but also the primary schools in town. As the girls drove off for state, the younger schools were let out to wave them off in style. The team first played a very challenging team from Corpus Christi and had to work incredibly hard to hold the lead at halftime. After losing the lead in the third quarter, the team caught back up only to be constantly fighting for the lead all the way up until the last ten seconds when the team was up by one point and had to defend until the time ran up and won with a score of 60 to 59. This win enabled the squad to hold the title of 2nd in state for 3A schools, an incredible accomplishment.

Varsity girls go all the way to State for first time

Pausing to look for a pass, senior captain Samantha Mahnesmith raises her head to find a teammate open for a shot. "I was trying to stop and look for a pass so that our team could get a fast break and go for the score," commented Mahnesmith. Mahnesmith has been playing varsity basketball since her freshman year and plans to continue with her full scholarship to SMU.

Starting the season off with win after win by dominating every team in district, the boys proved district to only be a pre-show for what was to come. After overcoming a few setbacks, such as starter Kiefer Hohenburger developing a sprained ankle, the team came back to prove that they were in it to win and minor injuries wouldn't stop them. Not only did the boys win District and Regionals, but continued on to play at the Erwin Center at the University of Texas at Austin on Thursday and Saturday to compete in the final four semi-finals, but they managed to scrape the two wins it took to win State. During the final game versus a team from San Antonio, the game remained extremely close with the lead bouncing back and forth between the two teams. With the end of the first half, the other team led by 3 points. In the third quarter, we showed them why we were here with a 17 to 4 run to give us a 50-40 lead entering the fourth quarter. However the other team wasn't going to walk away without a fight and continued to push hard to tie the score with a 53-53 score to start overtime. In the final moments of overtime, the other team scored a pair of 3 pointers to tie the game. For the win, senior Dominic Harris went in for the drive to pass to senior Brian Davis who would score the winning shot at the buzzer. "My absolute most memorable moment from this season was winning State. It is something that I won't forget for the rest of my life," commented Davis. Davis ended the game with 12 points, closely following Harris with 15 points, and Brad Hubenak had 9 points.

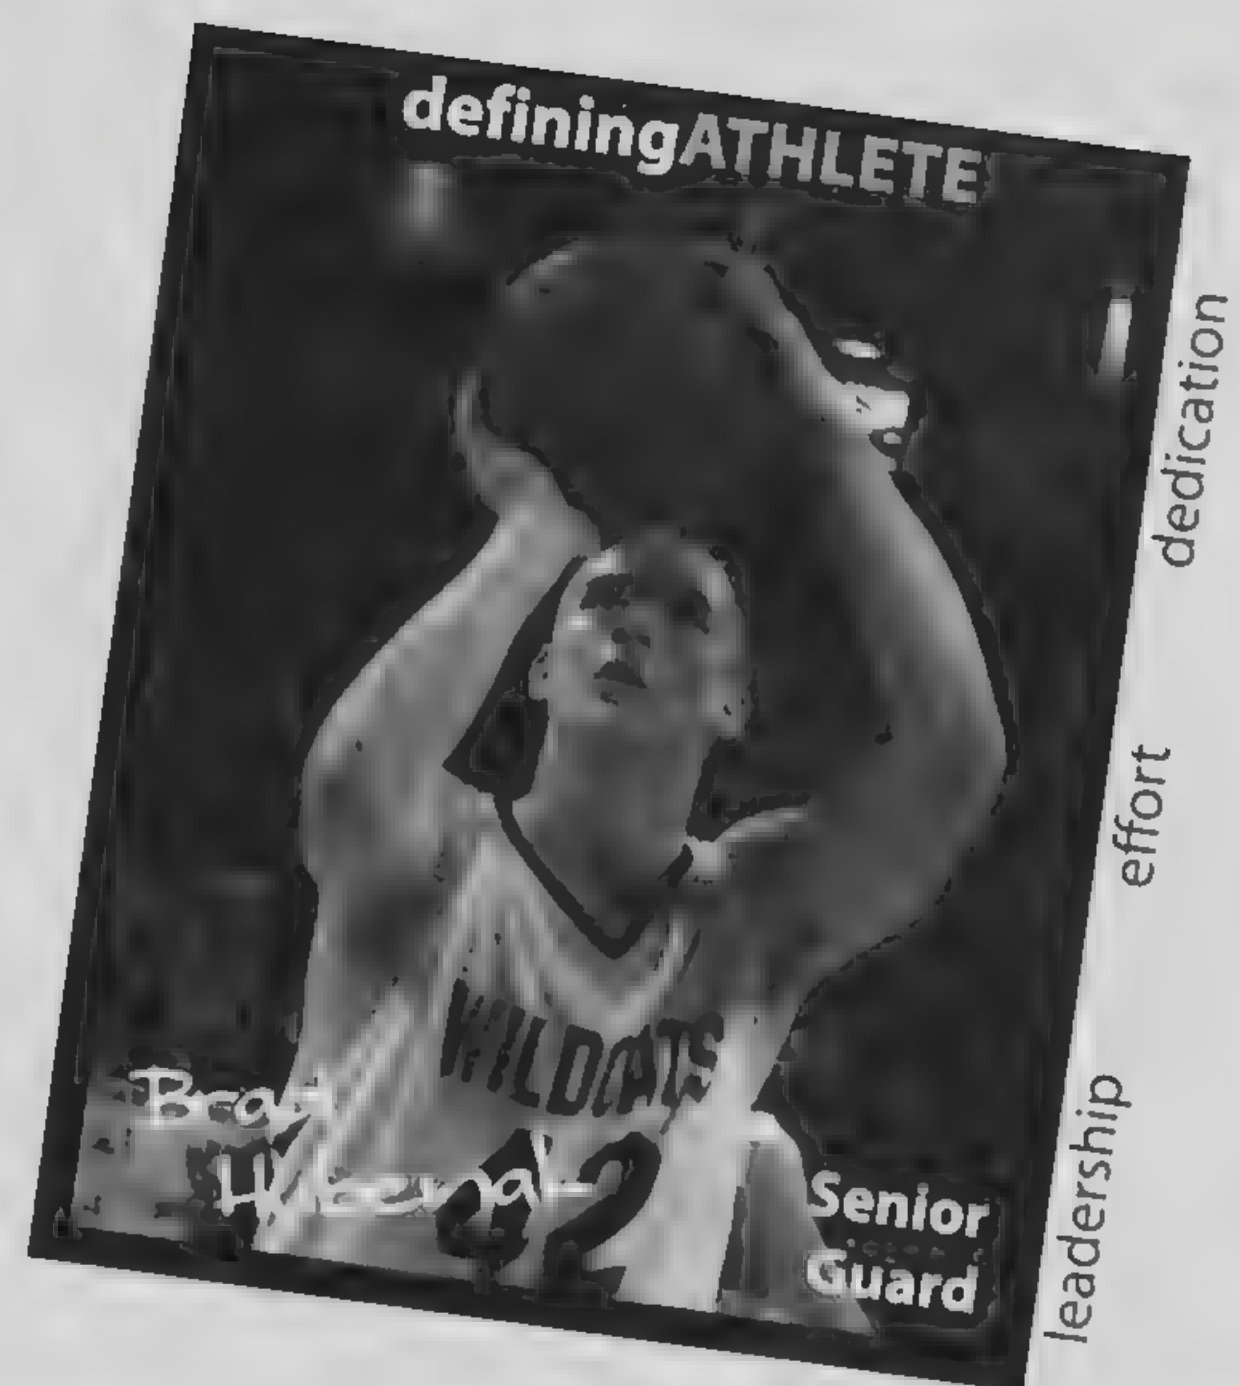

Shooting for victory

Varsity boys make history by winning State for first time ever

RIGHT In the defensive stance, senior Raphael Brooks denies the other team a drive to the basket. "Winning State has been the best thing that has happened in basketball and I will never forget how good it felt to play in Austin," shared Brooks. Brooks contributed to the team immensely with his perfect free throws.

FAR RIGHT Driving down the court for a fast break, senior Ryan Hoover shows his speed with the ball. Drives down the court give the team a larger opportunity for a shot at the basket. "I've been playing basketball for 12 years and my most memorable moment is winning State."

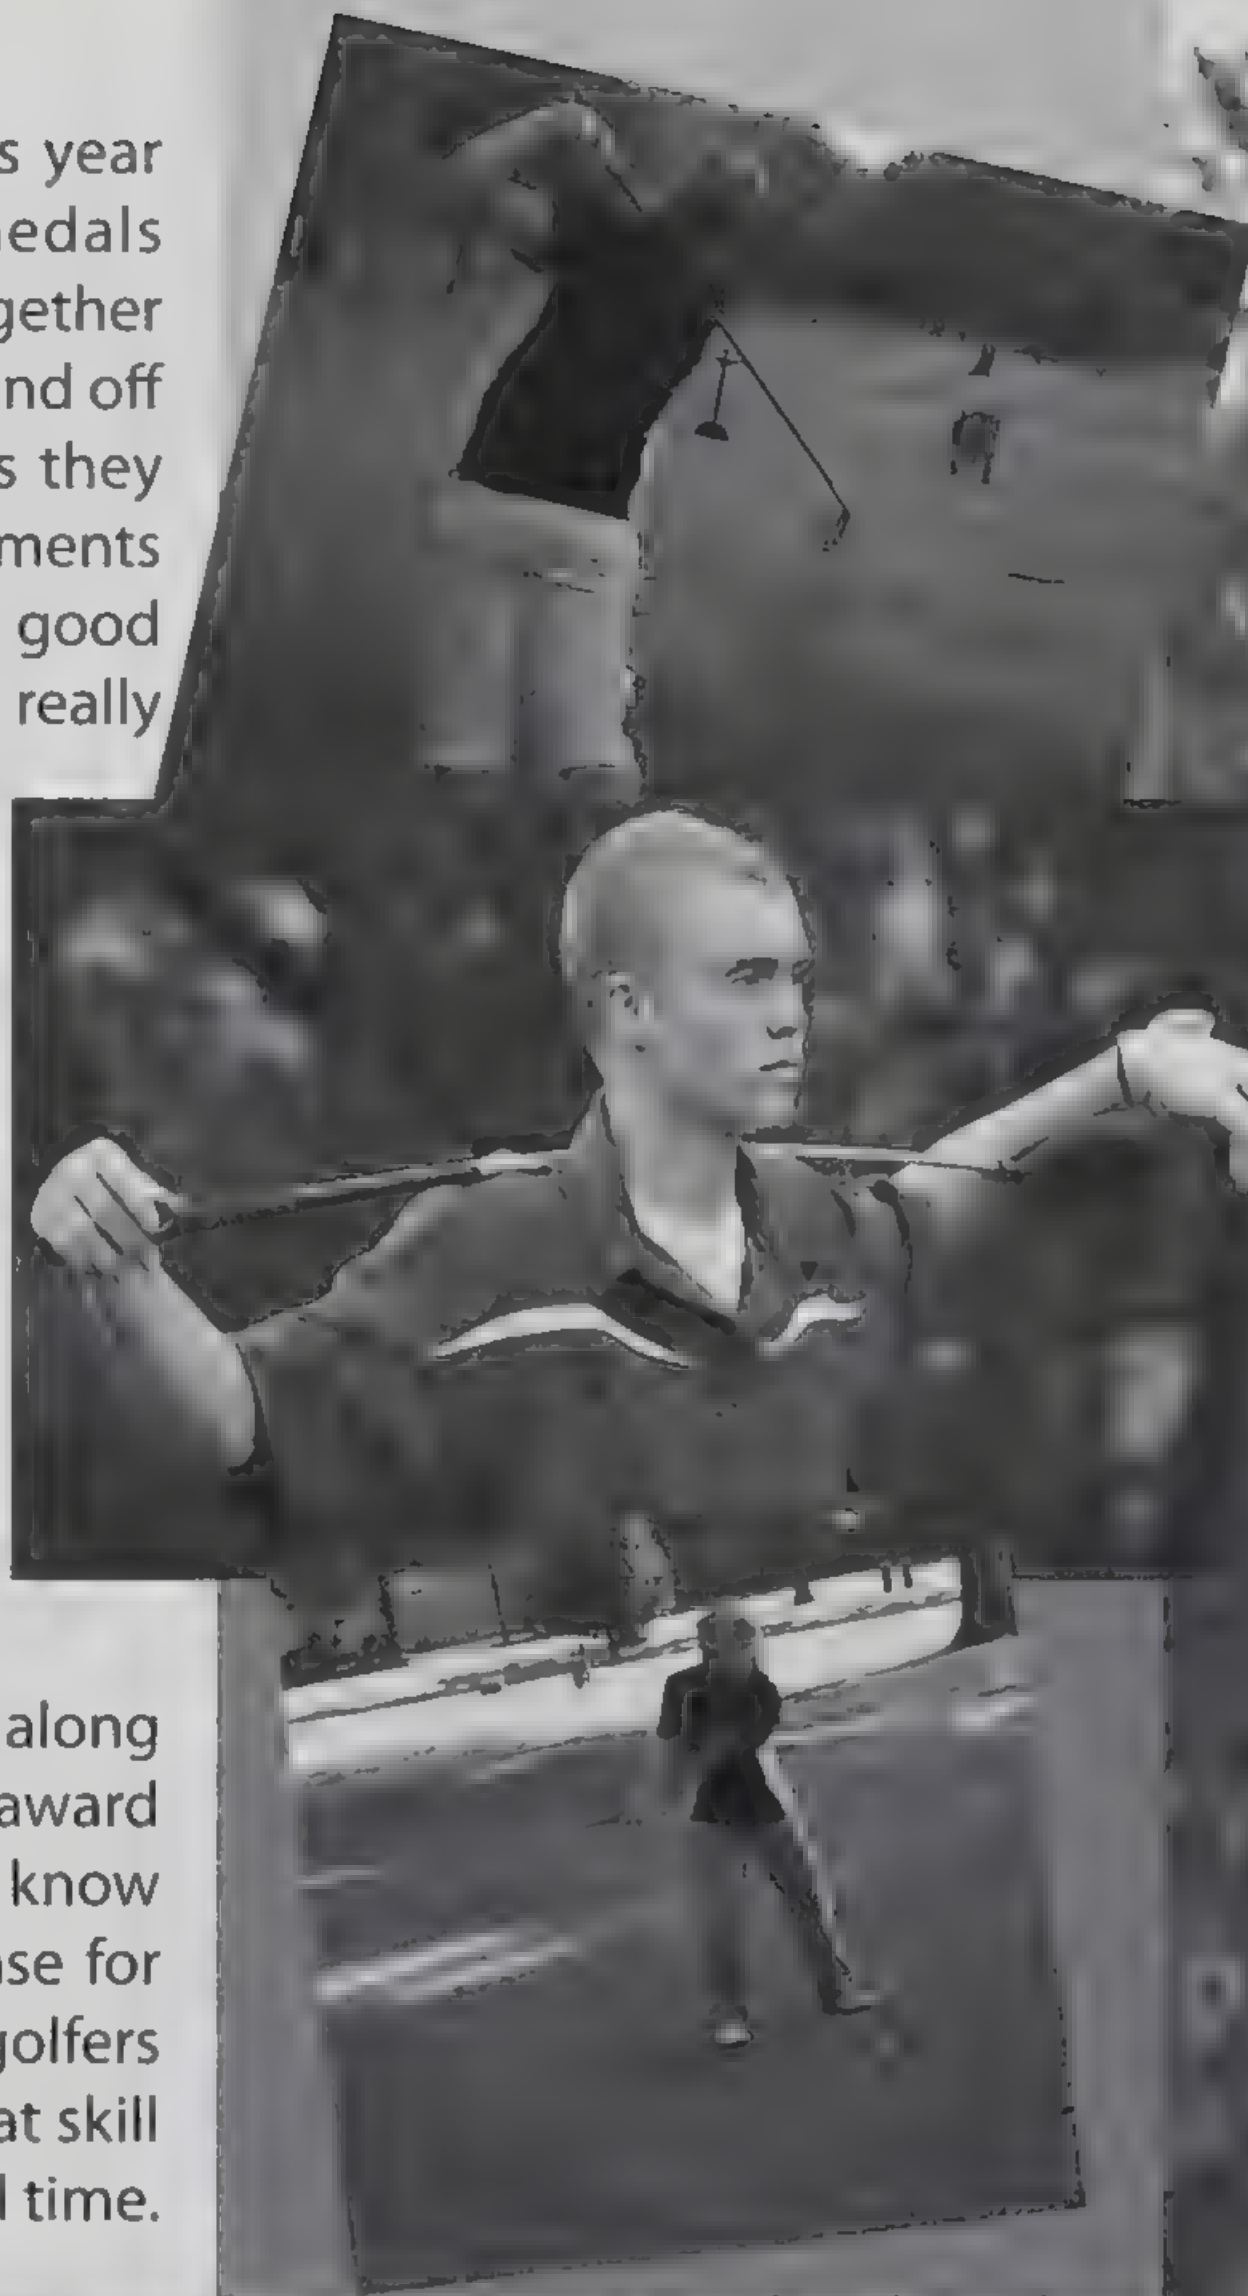

LEFT Coming together, the State champion Wildcats gather around their newly earned trophy. Winning by two points in overtime, the game would not have been the same had it not been for Coaches Groff, Haft, and Gann. "Winning State was a collective effort and would not have been achieved if it wasn't for the hard work and dedication put forth by the team and the other coaches," commented Groff.

ABOVE Going up for the layup, senior guard Dominic Harris outjumps his opponents. Harris was a huge component in the process of getting and winning State. "I have played basketball since the second grade as a guard. I also hope to continue on in college playing basketball, despite the fact that I'm not sure where I am going yet," shared Harris.

Our Wildcat golf team has done great this year bringing home several awards and medals throughout the season. They play well together and their camaraderie is evident both on and off the field. Anyone who has heard the conversations they have on the "Gus" on the way to and from their tournaments knows that they are just as concerned with having a good time as they are with winning the competitions. "I've really enjoyed not just playing in the tournaments but also just having a good time with everyone on the team, even Coach Schubert is fun to talk to and we all have a good time playing together," says senior Mitchell Yarbrough. The whole team mirrors his enthusiasm in the way they support and encourage each other to do well before every meet. This kind of great cooperative team dynamic is what helped the Wildcats and Lady Kats perform so well in their competitions; they came together and pulled off numerous victories including a first place win at the KHS Fall Frolic. Though trophies and medals hardly compare to the friendships and experiences are players accumulate along the way it always feels good when you can add an award to the trophy case at your school. "I'm really proud to know that a trophy I helped earn is going to be in the case for everyone to see," says Junior Trevor McDonald. The golfers this year did a great job not only exemplifying Wildcat skill and determination but also the ability to have a good time.

for success

Golf Teams win KHS Fall Frolic and create lasting memories

Junior Brady Capshaw looks on as his team mate Hunter Renick attempts to sink a put. "Putting comes really easy to me especially if I wiggle a little bit," remarked Renick jokingly. A strong putting game is critical to pull off par on any hole in the course, so it's lucky our team has it under wraps.

Lining up his drive, Junior Trevor McDonald gets ready to send the ball to the green. "Hitting a good drive is really important to making par on any hole and its a lot harder than it looks, you have to take into account a lot of different obstacles and terrain," said McDonald. This just goes to show getting a good start on anything even your golf game can really help.

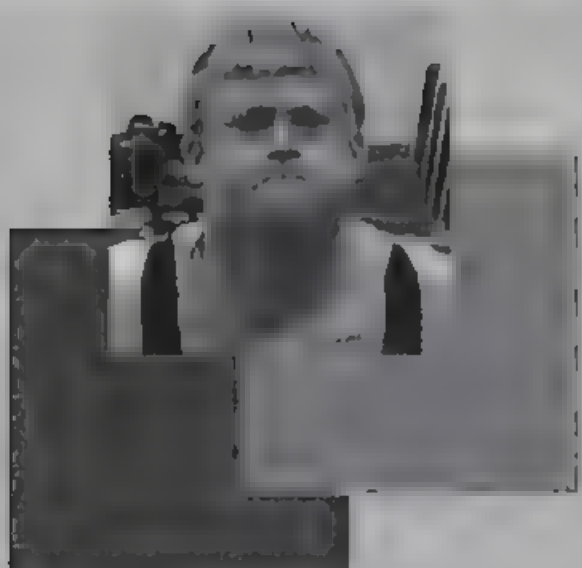

LEFT Walking around the golf course, freshman Travis McMeans carries his very heavy bag of clubs. The bags can make a golfer very tired and frustrated, "It kind of makes me mad that all the officials get to ride around in the golf carts when the players have to walk everywhere carrying their heavy clubs," McMeans remarked. McMeans and the other golfers carried their bags and their spirit through many courses and the bags didn't weight them down.

ABOVE Lost in thought, senior Mitchell Yarbrough prepares to take his next shot. "The whole game is mental, 98% of it is concentration so it's very important think about every shot before you make it," says Yarbrough. All the thought that goes into golf might make it seem a little boring, but that's what it takes to pull off a great game.

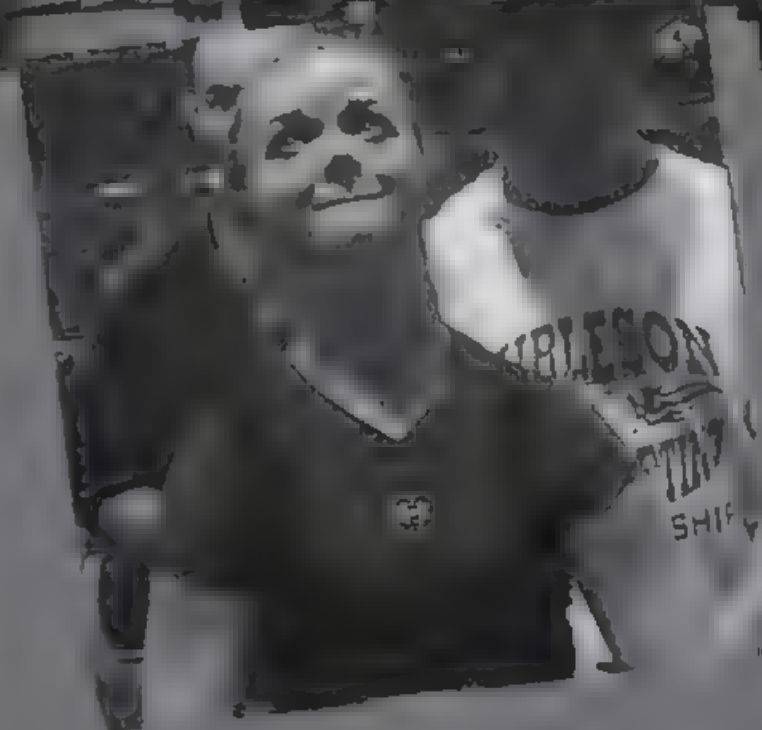

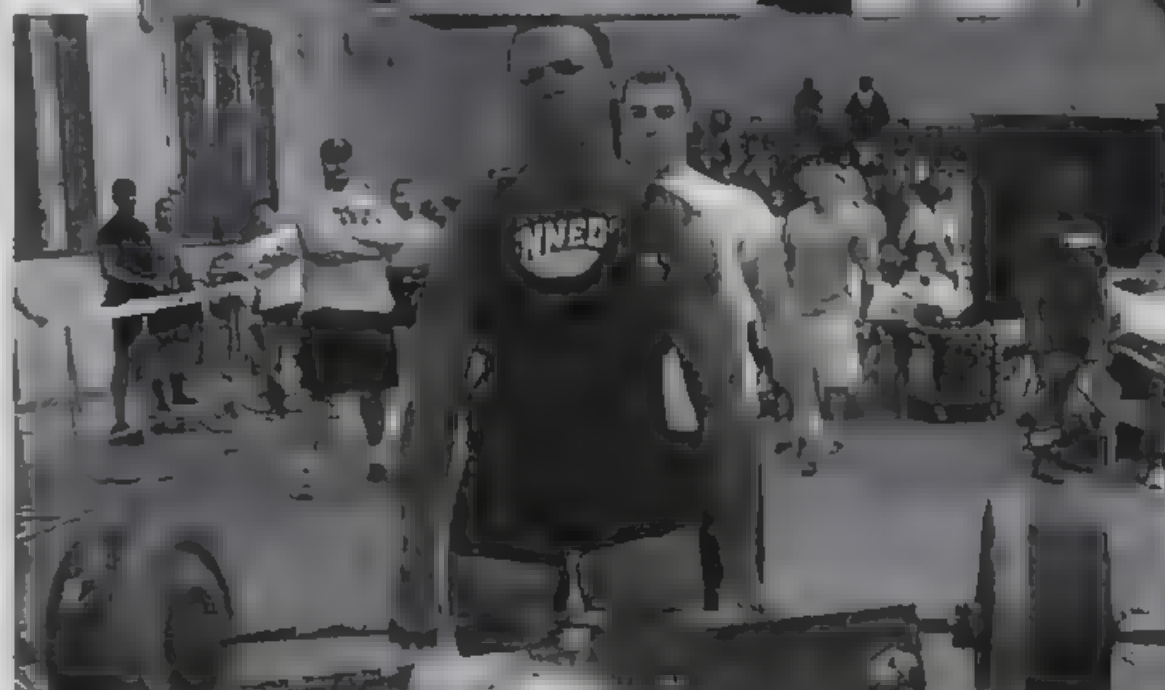

Fighting gravity, senior Brittany Jones focuses on lifting her weight in the dead lift competition. Jones placed first in the Regional competition and continued all the way to state. "I was very excited when I got first place in Regionals, but I was really disappointed when I DQ'd in the state competition," shared Jones.

Challenge it up

Powerlifting wins state title for second consecutive year

Unlike other team sports, powerlifting totals are a combination of every individual's score in the events of squat, dead lift, and bench press. Without a team working together, it is up to individuals to compete at their best in order to raise the team's score. This year the boy's powerlifting team placed first in the state tournament for 3A Division II. Senior TJ Sabando was first in the 198 lbs weight class with a total of 1580 lbs, lifting a record squat of 670 lbs and tying the bench record with 380 lbs. Seniors RB Neely and Ryan Collins finished second in their weight classes. Neely totaled 1560 lbs and Collins, 1300 lbs. Senior Joey Lucero finished third in his weight class with a total of 1660 lbs, defeating his old bench press record with a 485 lbs bench press. Raul Duran sealed the deal earning fifth in his weight class with a total of 1335 lbs. "It was a great experience to be apart of a program that has had the privilege of winning state two years in a row," shared Lucero. As for the Lady Kats this season, many did well at the local and Regional tournaments, but only one competitor managed to qualify for State. Senior Brittany Jones placed first place at the Regional meet with a personal squat max record of 335 lbs. Unfortunately, Jones was disqualified at the meet due to a miniscule infraction. Success, however, didn't end with Jones. Many other competitors did very well at local meets; sophomore Nikki Funderburk placed 2nd at the Kennedale meet, her first time in powerlifting. The strength shown through both powerlifting teams was extraordinary and a source of great pride for all of Kennedale.

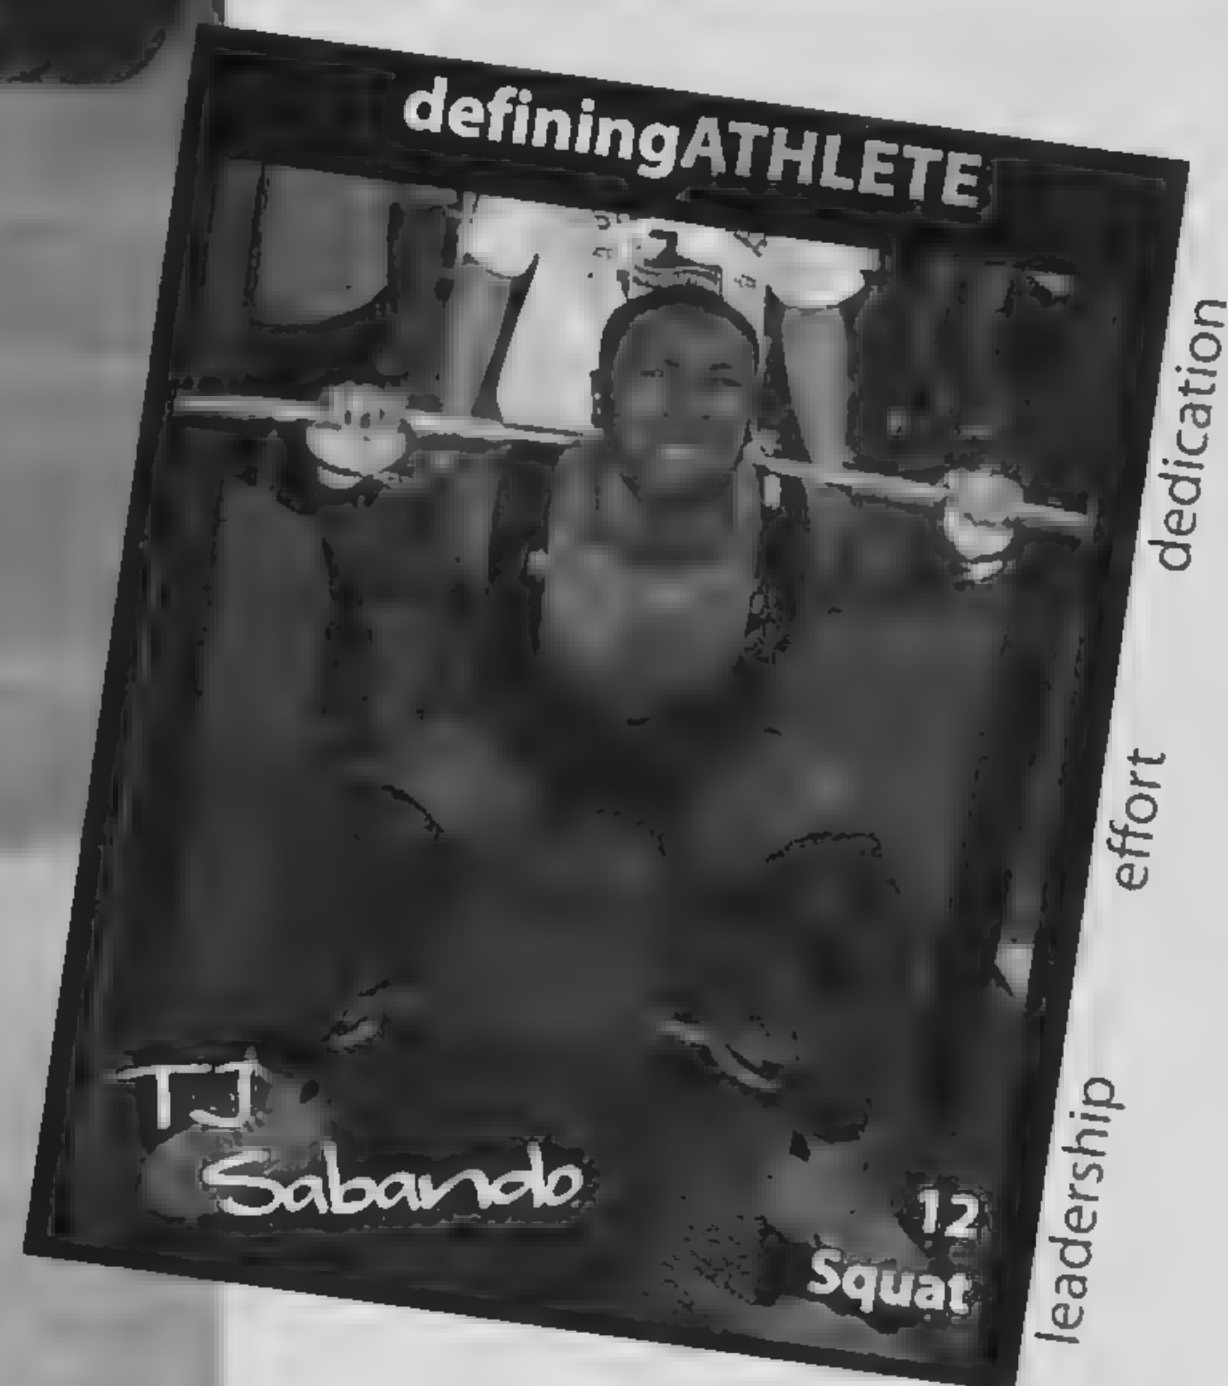

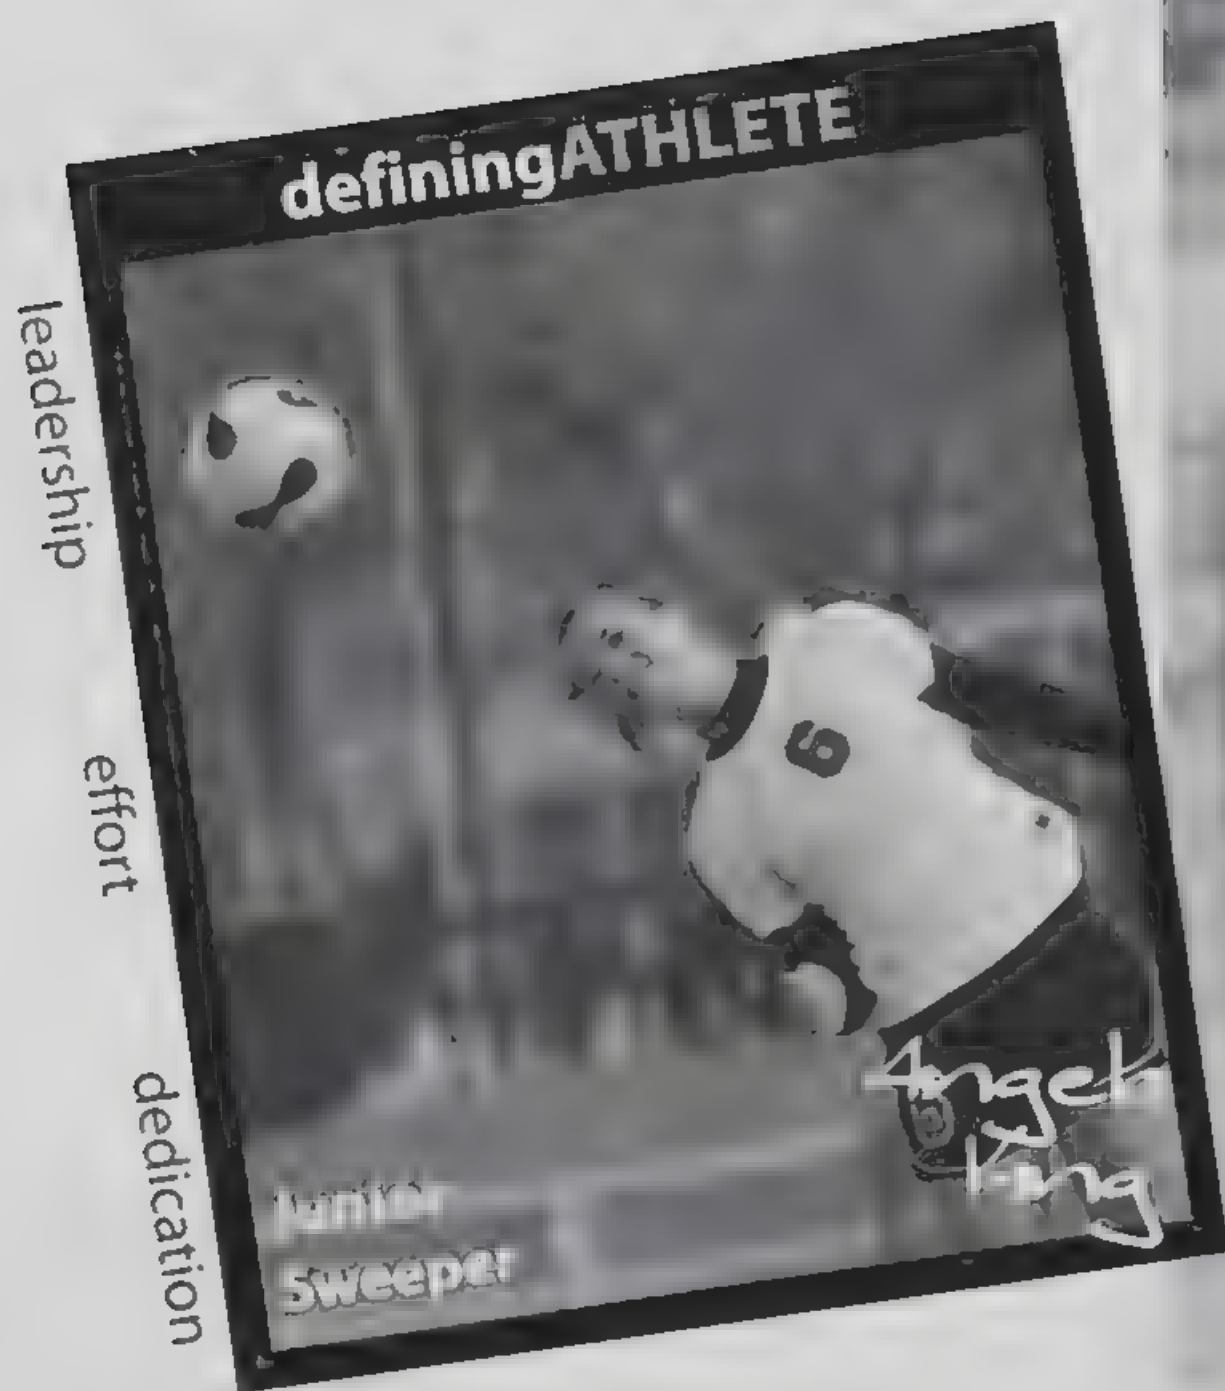

LEFT Focusing on his squat thrust, senior Raul Duran lifts his weight of 515 lbs. This was Duran's first year to participate in powerlifting. "It was exciting to place 5th in State with practically no experience in powerlifting," commented Duran. Duran also placed 2nd at the Regional conference held in Decatur.

BELOW Preparing to come up, sophomore Nikki Funderburk focuses on lifting her weights. "This was my first year to try powerlifting. I would have to say my favorite overall lift is the squat. It's easier for me because I am short and I don't have to go down as far," shared Funderburk. Funderburk placed second at the Kennedale meet.

Focusing on the lift, freshman Shiawo Garteh performs his squat thrust. "I think I did pretty well for my first time," commented Garteh. Garteh placed 5th at the Regional meet and plans to continue on in powerlifting with hopes to reach State next year.

In it to win it, junior Breanna Fleeman goes elbow to elbow to take control of the ball. "I have been playing for 13 years; I really enjoy it but sometimes it's a love-hate relationship," said Fleeman. Fleeman has played on the team since her freshman year. "I am planning on coming back next year," Fleeman enthusiastically expressed.

ABOVE Gearing up, sophomore Abbey Carpenter prepares a powerful shot across the field, hoping to score a goal. "Soccer is my favorite sport and whenever I play, I feel powerful, strong, and anxious," Carpenter commented. A real trooper, Carpenter played every position she could. "I gained acceptance and world peace," she joked.

RIGHT Defending the ball, sophomore Claudia Gonzalez tries to escape the swarm of Prosper players. Many players gained more than just skill and physical fitness. "I've gained a lot from playing soccer, like to endure and not give up no matter what the challenges I'm faced with," explained Gonzalez.

This was a brand new year, in every way, for the Kennedale Lady Kats. This year they lost some of last year's defensive players, but the freshman girls and new recruits really stepped up their game. The new recruits formed a young team, made up of mostly freshmen and sophomores who love the sport. "I love being out there on the field," explained sophomore captain Brooke Farmer, "It never feels like something I have to do, it's just a way to express my athletic ability." The team also had the task of getting accustomed to a new coach: Coach Jay Zeller. Trying to get used to such a sudden change was tough for the girls. "We worked hard, motivated each other, and tried to keep our passion for the game strong," responded junior captain Angela King when asked how they re-adjusted. All the changes brought new challenges and rewards. The varsity Lady Kats participated in two tournaments. The first, the Eustace Tournament, gave the girls confidence when they came out with a win. The second was held at Kennedale; the first time hosting a soccer tournament. Throughout the year, the girls found that soccer was a good release for their pent up emotions. "During the adrenaline rush, you just want to tackle someone. It feels good," replied Lauren Woods. Practice makes perfect, even in soccer, but the hard work was balanced with good times. "Practice is fun; we get to be with the girls, and we're a family; but there's no practice like the real thing," said Mandi King. The girls played in district 94A, had a district record of 4-7-3 and an overall record of 12-8-3. The season to come will be a tough one for them since they will be playing against 5-A schools as well as 4-A. Next year's new, inexperienced freshmen have a lot to learn and a long way to go.

Forming

With a young team and new coach, Lady Kats win first tournament

Sprinting down the field, senior Charley Gonzalez rushes towards the goal to do what she does best...score!. "I get so focused into the game with the rush of adrenalin; I've been playing since I was four and have had lots of fun," expressed Gonzalez. Sadly this was her last season for high school soccer, but she wishes her team good luck for the year to come.

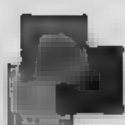

Fun and challenging, a season to remember. "We could have done a little better, two district wins is a little depressing," claimed junior Ryan Johnson. Even though the season was not "ideal", the boys still have hope. "We've improved, and we'll be back next year!" commented junior Matthew Flaherty. Aside from the games, the boys really enjoyed their practices. They listened to such classic warm-up songs like "One Day Women will Become Monsters" and "Shoot Up" before they started a game. They found that their practices were a fun and exciting way to stay in shape before and between games. Soccer had other benefits for the young athletes, aside from the physical fitness. "We get to travel a lot and meet all sorts of new people; it really broadens your horizons," explained sophomore Nathan Degan. They gained many new friends and a sense of companionship along their journeys. When asked what he gained from the soccer experience, sophomore Zane Guadagnolo replied, "Friends, definitely friends, because during the game when you're out there playing, the adrenaline is rushing and your heart is pumping, so you have to have good relations with your teammates." The season's final tally was fifteen losses and ten wins for the Kennedale boys' soccer team; they plan to improve their techniques for the upcoming season. The team would love for more Kennedale Wildcats to come down and support their efforts, even though their games take part in the winter. Bundle up and come observe these dedicated players doing what they do best: soccer!

Wildcats continue to improve under direction of Coach Zeller

Battling hard, sophomore Miguel Cabrera breaks free of his opposition and charges down the field towards the goal. "I love how I feel when I play soccer; it makes me happy. I've also gained tolerance and friends thanks to soccer," added Cabrera. He plans on sharpening his skills as a forward sweep over the summer break before next season.

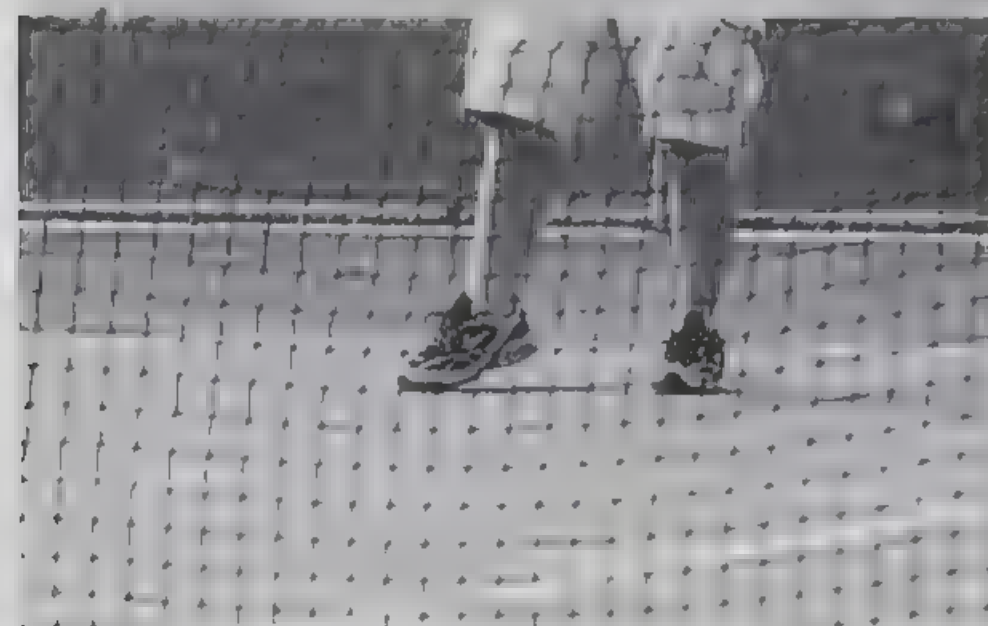

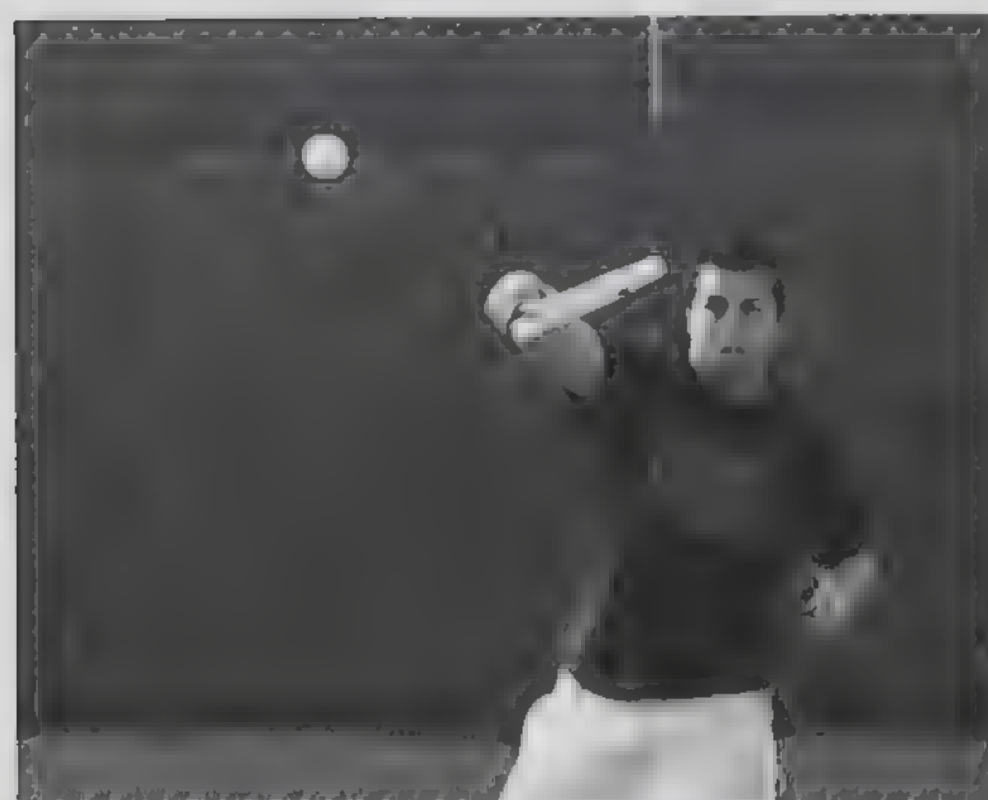

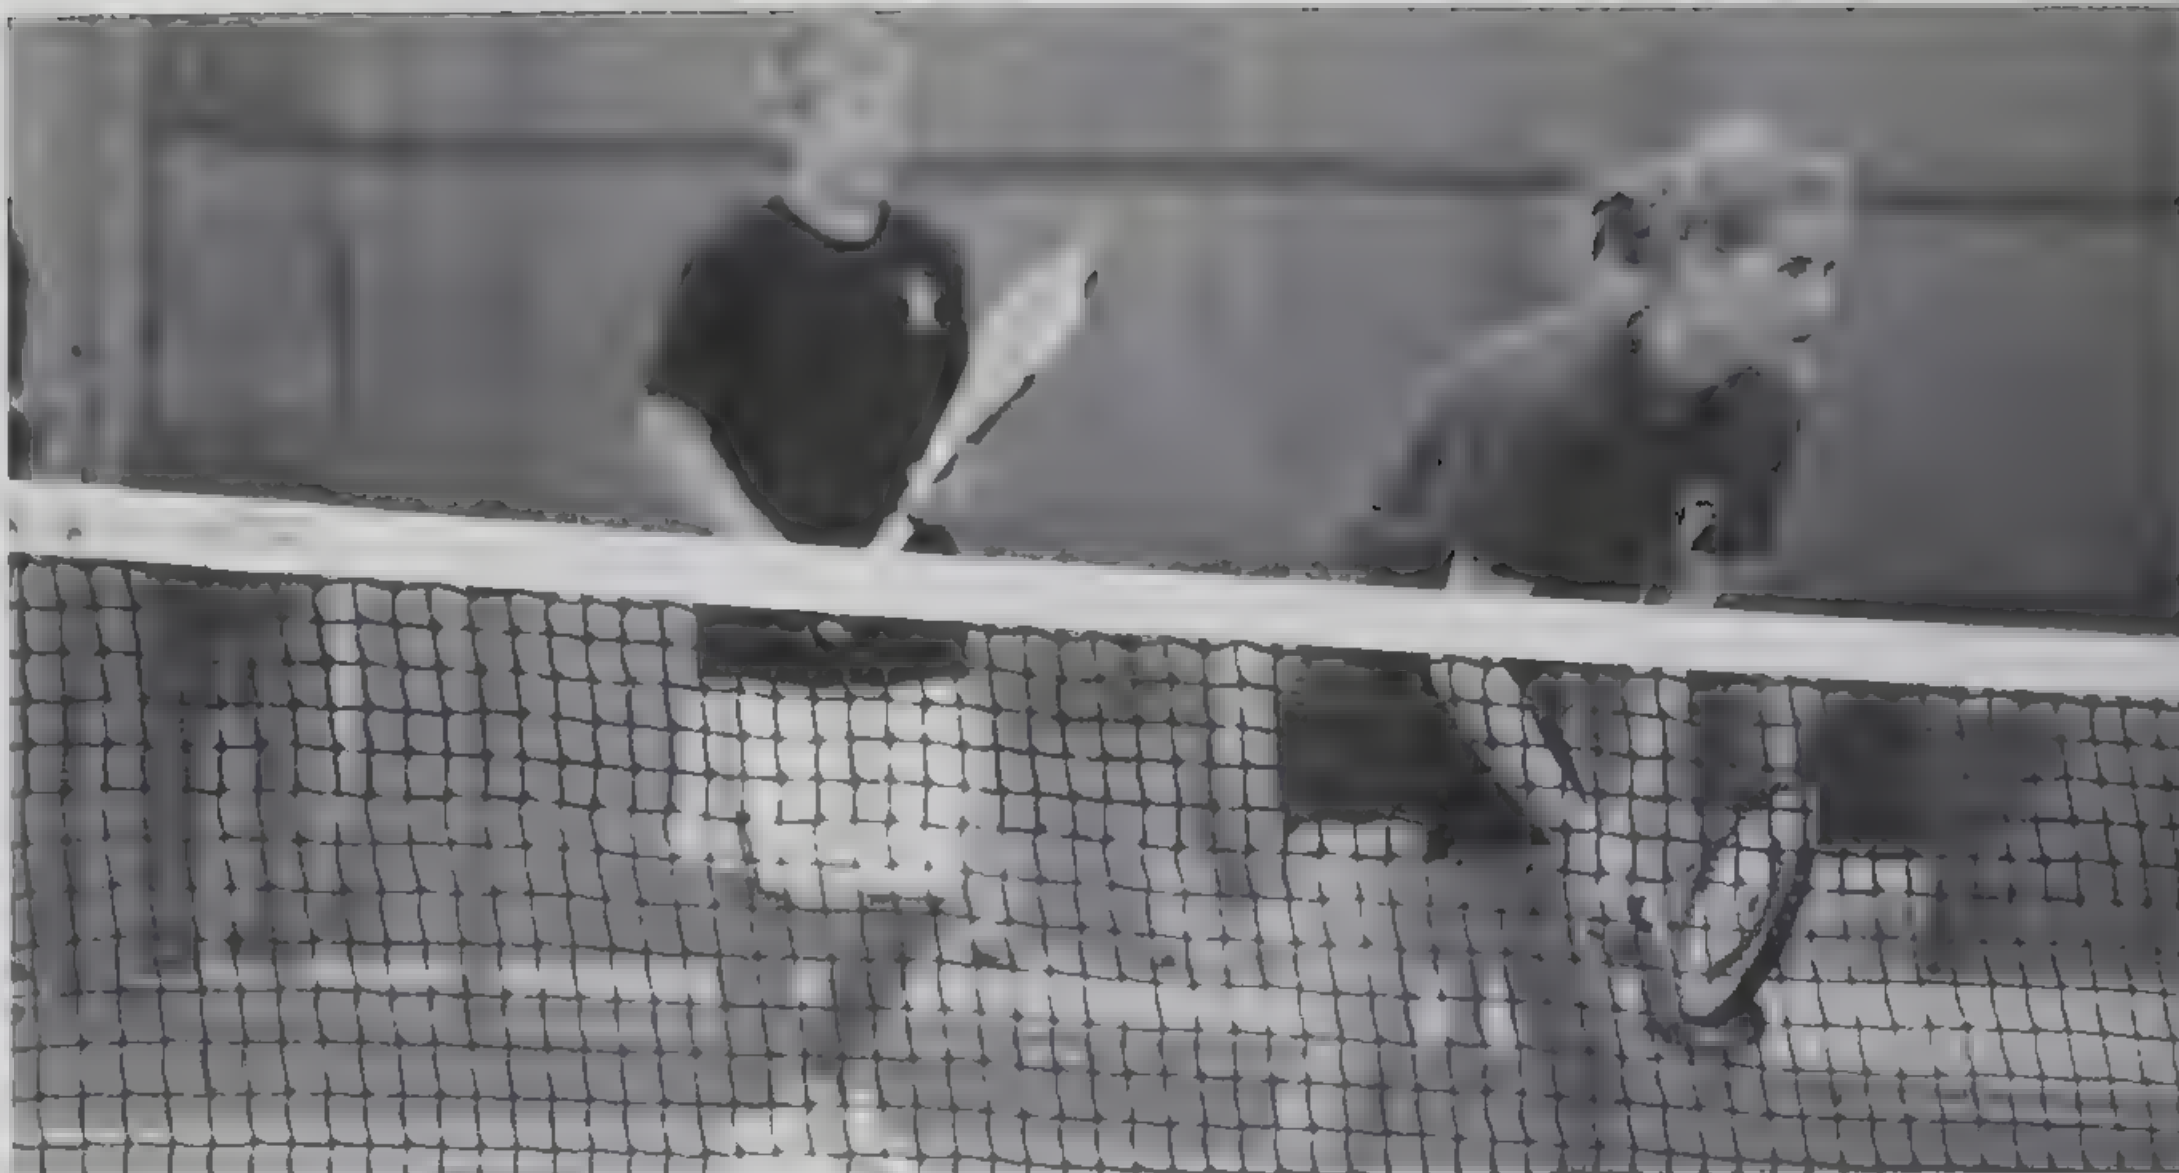

LEFT With teamwork, sophomore Billy Levey and junior Mickey Shark maneuver past a rival to get to their goalpost. "I've played since I was six years old now and have gained many good friends along the way," expressed Shark. He plans on practicing with his friends over the summer and returning next season.

ABOVE Practice makes perfect, sophomore Edward Gallant perfects his soccer techniques for the team's future games. "I love the adrenaline rush I get when I play soccer, plus it helps me stay in shape," expressed Gallant. The season was a tough one on the boys, but they were able to leave it with smiles and a promise to play harder next year.

RIGHT Guarding the net, junior Sara Jensen and freshman Timothy Brestowski prepare for the oppositions serving attack. "I only started playing tennis this year and I had a lot of fun playing it. I'm really sad it's over," quoted Jensen. Brestowski and Jensen both share a love for tennis and plan on participating in singles next year.

BELOW Power in hand, junior Cole Brizendine returns the ball with an impressive smash against his West opponents. "I feel excited and ready to play whenever I step onto the court," explained Brizendine. Like most of the Wildcat tennis players, Brizendine was influenced to join the team through his friends.

Springing upward, freshman Vincent Nguyen furiously strikes a serve, aiming to snatch an ace from his Whitney competition. "My friends got me into it and I started playing tennis over the summer. I've gained experiences from being in tennis," expressed Nguyen. He plans on participating in boys' singles next year at the Varsity District Tournament next year.

Wildcats step up their game advancing to Regionals

The tennis team has gone through a rebuilding year having lost most of the girls' varsity and a portion of the boys' varsity players. Therefore they have many new additions to the Junior Varsity and Varsity teams, including many new freshman players. "It's very comforting knowing that anyone can do anything in this school," expressed freshman Timothy Brestowski. Many of the new freshmen players felt the same way as Brestowski, getting to already play with upperclassmen in games.

"I really enjoyed this season since I was able to go to regional even though they completely destroyed me," joked senior Brian Davis. Accompanied by senior Keifer Hohenberger, Davis attended the Regional Tennis Tournament with pride in his hard work. The JV team was also able to walk away from the season with a few victories under their belts. Junior Rich Patterson won 1st place in the boys' singles division of the JV District Tournament. Seniors Cameron Garland and Chase Lariviere snagged 1st while senior Erik Hackett and junior Oscar Jimenez achieved 3rd in boys' doubles. On the girls' side, sophomore Kristin Powell and junior Ayodele Odubela snatched up the 2nd for girls' doubles. "I play tennis so I can beat those girls from Whitney because they cheated, which is really sad since we still won," explained Odubela. Many of the players plan on practicing over the summer in hopes of becoming a Varsity player next year. "The practices were fun and I wish the season could have gone on longer," enlightened Hohenberger. All in all, it has been a great season for the Wildcat Tennis Team.

Leaping towards victory, junior Jazzmyn Cooper lands her outstanding long jump. "This is my first year doing relays and I really enjoyed helping the team. I was also excited to go to state in hurdles." Newcomers like Cooper helped the team stay strong and pumped up and will prove a great help on next year's team.

Junior start to victory

Through all the hard work and pain that the Kennedale track team endured, they remained loyal to their sport by competing at the highest level. Senior Eric Brooks said the effort put forth was "what I had to do to make our team better...however, it was worth it to win...it was exciting, and at the time it didn't phase me." The team bonded through the work, becoming good friends. Junior Stacia Newton stated, "My favorite part of track is going out and participating with my team and showing many other schools what Kennedale is made of; but the hard part is keeping motivated because it's not just about you it's about the whole team." The team practiced everyday, through any weather conditions, to achieve their goals. All the practice paid off as they advanced from district to Regionals to State. The competition was fierce but Kennedale kept up and stayed strong. Jazzmyn Cooper, Eric Brooks, and Stacia Newton all represented Kennedale at the state meet. Cooper received eighth in the 100 hurdles and Newton won second in discus. Coming home with a big win was Brooks who received a hard earned gold in 110 hurdles. There were many other notable athletes who exceeded expectations this year, including Chelsea Dunn, a newcomer who broke many of her personal records. The 4x400 relay team (Aaron Wingfield, Bo Burgess, Casey Reed, and Michael Ortiz) also did an outstanding job; according to teammates, they could have made it to State. The track team's success was made from the dedication of all members, as well as the coaches, who's support made a great team even better.

LEFT Finishing strong, Cesar Robles runs to his fullest abilities. "I have been running track since junior high. I made it to regionals in the 4 x4 relay and it's my favorite," said Robles. Robles, among many other track athletes, loved his sport; this made practicing worth the effort

BELOW Throwing all the way to State, junior Stacia Newton places second in state for discus. "I love doing track, I was so excited to go to state this year and place. I hope to go back next year and get gold in both shot put and discus." The practice and strength building gained throughout the year was worth it for Stacia's winning moments at State.

With deep concentration, senior Destini Hughes arches her back to jump over the pole. "I only competed in the District meet this year and I ended up going all the way to Regionals," stated Hughes. This was Destini's second year jumping and she enjoyed the experiences it gave her.

Up to bat, senior Claire Pritchett swings high for the ball. "It was really hard to have such young players with us, but I think it helped them grow as people and players by getting the opportunity to play up," shared Pritchett. This was Pritchett's fourth year to play on varsity.

ABOVE Throwing the heat, freshman Ashley Abair winds up to pitch the ball. Abair was voted Pitcher of the Year in District which was an incredible honor for someone so young. This was Abair's first year to play varsity.

RIGHT Going low for the ball, freshman Kayla Bay swings for the hit. Bay was among the numerous freshmen given the opportunity to play varsity this year. With the collapse of the junior varsity team, many freshmen got to participate on the varsity team, making their first year of high school, very memorable.

This year was a bit different from prior years due to the collapse of the junior varsity softball team. With no JV team, many freshmen and sophomores got the opportunity to play on varsity before they would have in prior years. However, a few underclassmen would have been given the opportunity no matter how many teams there had been. For example, freshman Ashley Abair was nominated as Pitcher of the Year of the district and sophomore Morgan Spearman was nominated Most Valuable Player. Freshman Kayla Bay also received Honorable Mention. Upperclassmen Sheri Snell received 2nd Team All-District and Denea Dixon received an Honorable Mention. Despite such a young team, the girls were able to pull everything together and perform well in district, "all thanks to my coach, Amie Kirkpatrick," shared senior Claire Pritchett. Coach Kirkpatrick was very avid about the team running this year, and the team even admitted that the additional training helped them during the games that went into extra innings. It was thanks to Coach Kirkpatrick that the team was able to overcome their age and work together as a team. "Out of all of my years on varsity, this was the best! Coach Kirkpatrick taught me so much these past four years that helped me become a better ball player. I had friendships that grew even stronger and memories that I will never forget. I can only hope the best for the team in the future and that they always remember to play with their hearts and stay focused," shared senior captain Claire Pritchett.

While tagging the player, junior Megan Watson takes the collision to get the opponent out. Watson led the team in runs batted in and home runs and had just come back from shoulder surgery during the fall. This was Watson's third year to play on varsity.

This year's Kennedale baseball season was full of home runs, new records, and unforgettable memories. "This season was the best one ever. We worked harder in the summer; we practiced everyday for two and a half hours," senior Benny Woodard commented. Baseball coach Jet Teague also added, "2008 was a tremendous turn around for the boys. This year we had a record of 22-2, while last year it was 15-15. It's a big difference and we all worked so hard for it. The Wildcats were also district champs, and did this by having a better work ethic and being stronger both physically and mentally." Adding to their outstanding list of accomplishments, the boys played in the regional semi-finals. Not only did the passion to win games motivate the boys to score home runs, but also the bond between them, which grew stronger as they played further into the season. "Our chemistry was a lot better. We played more rigorously as a team," remarked junior player David Hayes. On the contrary, the bond between senior Jason Yeley and junior Jeffrey Yeley, grew more aggressive out on the field. "My younger brother and I don't really argue when we're at home, but when we're playing baseball, we tend to criticize how we each play; just so we all play better together," Jason remarked. The team cooperated in order to achieve greatness, and set extremely high standards for the upcoming players and teams. The amount of pride each player, and coach, has in their sport and teammates is truly inspiring. Coach Teague topped off a remarkable season with words of admiration: "Our team had a great year. Everybody had great leadership that helped set many team and individual records. I'm very proud of each and every one of the players."

Kennedale baseball goes on to have an outstanding season

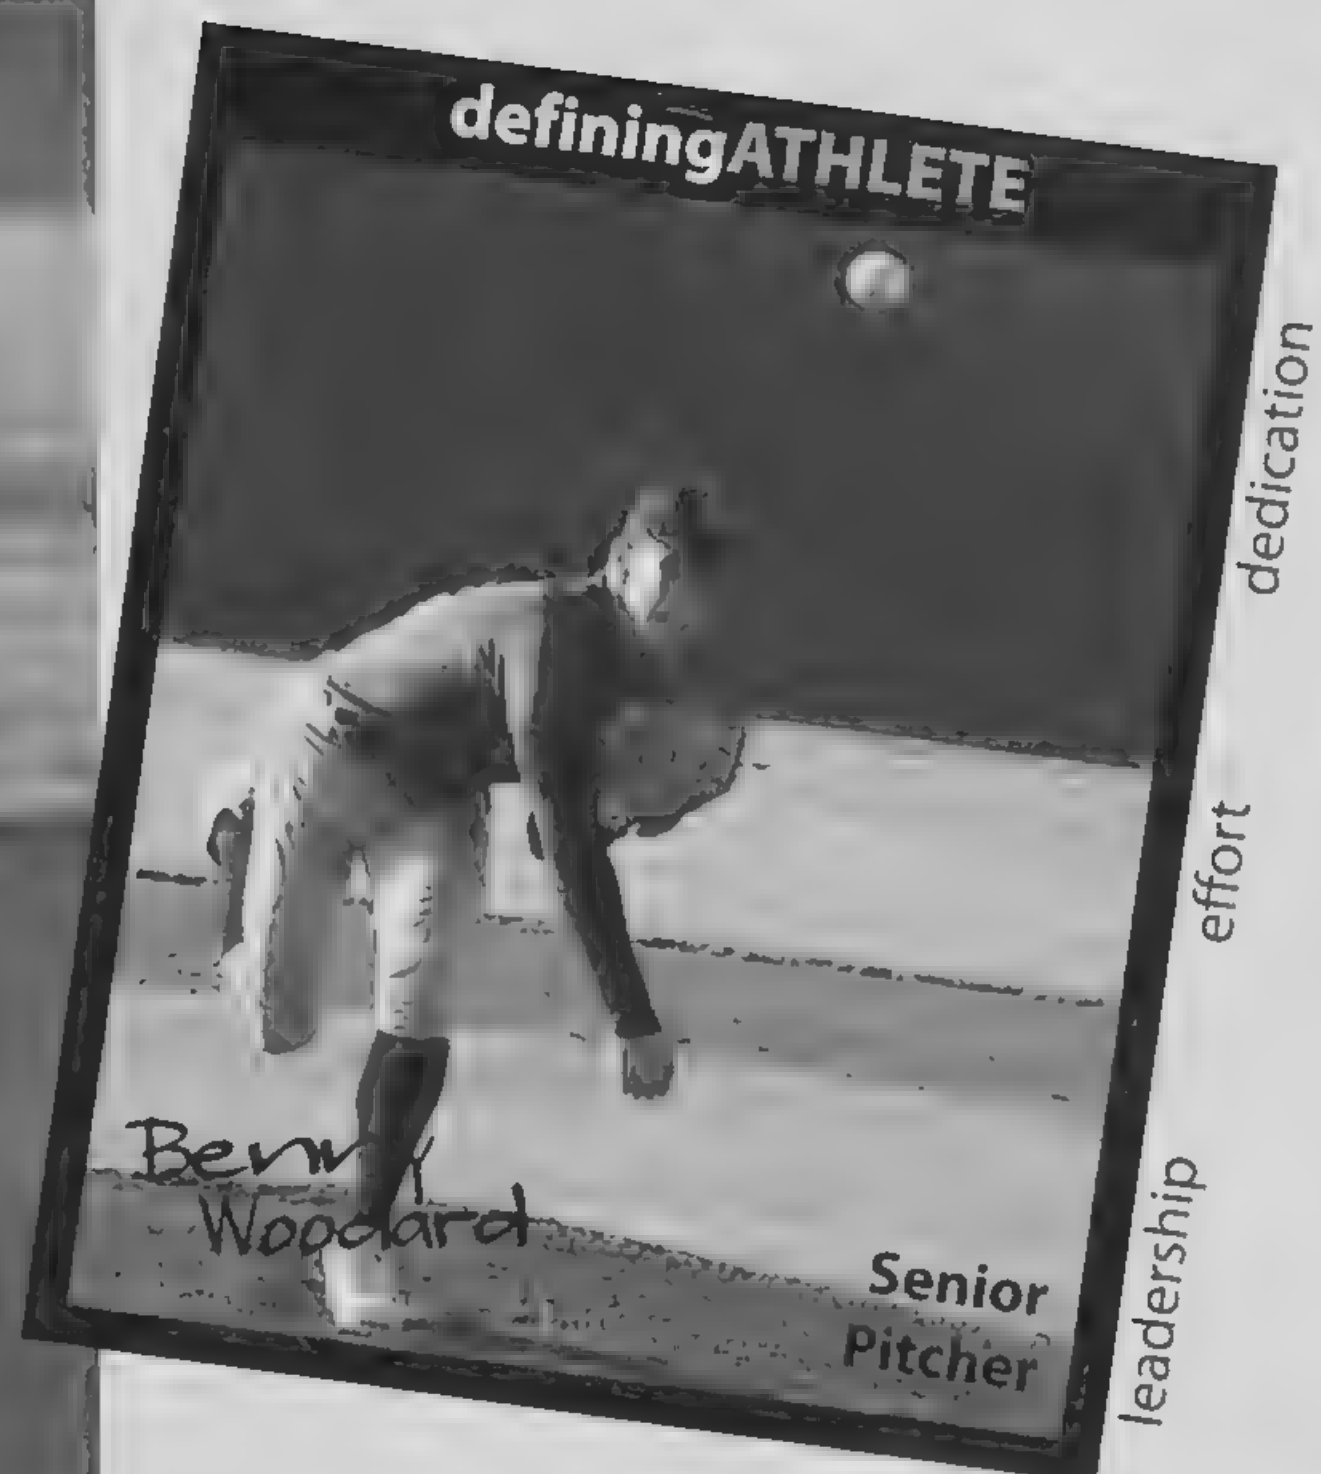

RIGHT Prepping to pitch, junior Brady Capshaw focuses to make the batter strike out. "I have played baseball for a long time. I really like it a lot," said Capshaw, "I just get really hyped and pumped up for the games we have." Brady was a great addition and helped the team win the district title.

FAR RIGHT Hitting the ball, senior Manny Correa buys enough time for fellow players to make it to the next base. "Baseball is my favorite sport," commented Correa, "I believe it challenges the body the most, but still has to do mostly with luck."

Getting a face full of dirt, sophomore Wesley Roberson slides into the base to avoid getting tagged with the ball. "Before I slide, I think about how close I am to the base and if I can make it," explained Roberson. "Other times, it is just for show or instinct." Wesley has loved baseball since he was little and plans to go on to play in college.

RIGHT While anticipating their turn to play, freshmen Tim Brown and Cameron Massengill, sit patiently in the dugout. "I'm just thinking about winning the game," commented Brown. Despite the heat and eagerness to play in the field, Massengill stayed focused "mainly thinking about the game and what positions to play. I'm just really excited to play my position, tight field, because I enjoy catching the baseballs and having the chance to score or double play."

ABOVE While avoiding an out, freshman short stop Hayden Elrod slides towards third base with a safe run. "Before the game, all I thought about was coming home with a win, which got me pumped up," he exclaimed, "I also like my position because it lets me turn double plays into great plays." His love for this All-American sport has grown over the years, and plans to continue it throughout high school.

showcasing our ingenuity

The activities we are involved in during high school can be just a few, or more than we can count on our fingers. It all depends on who we are and what we want to do. The different organizations and clubs offered span across a wide variety of interests. From community service to art, from singing to business, and from religion to acting, each of us can find something to identify with. We can choose to be a part of a group or we can choose to be independent. Each decision we make defines us. Our various groups can aid us in our path through high school and into our future. We learn valuable information and gain incredible experiences with each activity and event we involve ourselves in. We gain friends and memories through our groups and clubs, which define our past, present, and even our future. Outside of our social lives, another important defining characteristic is our ability to define ourselves in academics as well as in social situations. We decide whether or not we are going to try to do well in our classes. We decide whether or not it is better to study the night before or the five minutes before class. We decide whether or not we are going to behave or act out in class too. As we progress through our school years in general, but especially in high school, our work load becomes heavier, expectations greater, and the topics become harder to grasp. We try our best to get through alive, and ultimately we do survive, but sometimes with a few scratches and bruises. Our efforts define who we are right now, as well as in the future. Our transcripts, which are a reflection of our accomplishments, are also the key to the future. They represent our efforts in school and allow colleges to define us. Kennedale has also improved its definition of academics with new teachers and higher expectations. More electives are now offered which allow us to focus our interests and passions, and better define our future. In school, and in life, we define ourselves by our groups, activities, and efforts, not just by our abilities. How are you defining yourself?

Surfing the web, juniors Julie Robinson and Rebecca Young research information for their AP English 3 class project over famous American authors John Steinbeck and Louisa May Alcott. The laptops came from the KHS library and were used by Mrs. Thacker's class for two of the four weeks they spent on the project. "I prefer to use the computer rather than a book because you type something in and it's there. It's faster than just reading a book," commented Robinson.

dependent

Students utilize technology tools to enhance learning

The spread and development of technology is fast pace and constantly improved to insure that our lives are easier and more pleasant. Cell phones, computers, and digital cameras have all drastically altered our way of life. Even in schools, technology is found from the security cameras in the halls, to the computers, projectors, and calculators used in the classrooms to improve the education of the students. Calculators are extremely useful in math and can cut down the amount of time spent solving a problem from several minutes to a few seconds depending, of course, on the complexity of the problem. In Mrs. Cook's Pre-Calculus and Calculus classes, the old TI 83+ calculators, which are five to ten years old, have been replaced with the new TI 84+ silver addition. These new calculators can do everything the old ones could, and much more. They have, for example, a faster processor, more memory and programs, a study card, and an organizer. "The TI 84 calculators can graph conics, solve polynomial equations, and play games," quoted Cook. All the computer labs have been upgraded with updated software including the Adobe Master Collection which includes applications used in both Yearbook and Digital Graphics & Animation classes, such as the new versions of Photoshop, Illustrator, InDesign, and Flash. Other lab updates include SynchronEyes which the teachers use to monitor the students' computers, ceiling mounted projectors, and SmartBoards. SmartBoard is an interactive touch sensitive white board that connects to, and displays, the computer screen image. In science classes, motion detectors, pH sensors, and temperature probes are used during labs. Ms. Pollard's senior Physics class conducted a three week lab using an internet lesson and a motion detector which sent out sound waves that reflected off objects back to the detector, which then calculated the distance between the two. With new technology available, KHS is becoming a high-tech school, educating students in modern ways.

With a click of the mouse, senior DeeDee Felan concentrates on creating a vector drawing using Adobe Illustrator CS3, a new graphics program. "It was really easy to use; it helped in creating drawings and graphics for practice in Mrs. Coffman's class," commented Felan. Illustrator was just one of the many high-tech software applications students mastered in Mrs. Coffman's Digital Graphics and Animations class. Other applications included Adobe Photoshop, Flash, and InDesign.

Moving with guidance, juniors Brittany Williams and Gabrielle Lee operate the Elmo in Mrs. Brooke's Humanities class. The Elmo is a projector from the ELMO Company that uses a camera to project an image onto the wall. "It's really cool to point it at the board and stand in front of it; it looks like there are five of you," remarked Lee. "The Elmo machine makes it much easier for students to share information and for me to share information with them. Plus it's really cool," stated Brooke. The Elmo is brand new this year and might replace other projectors at KHS.

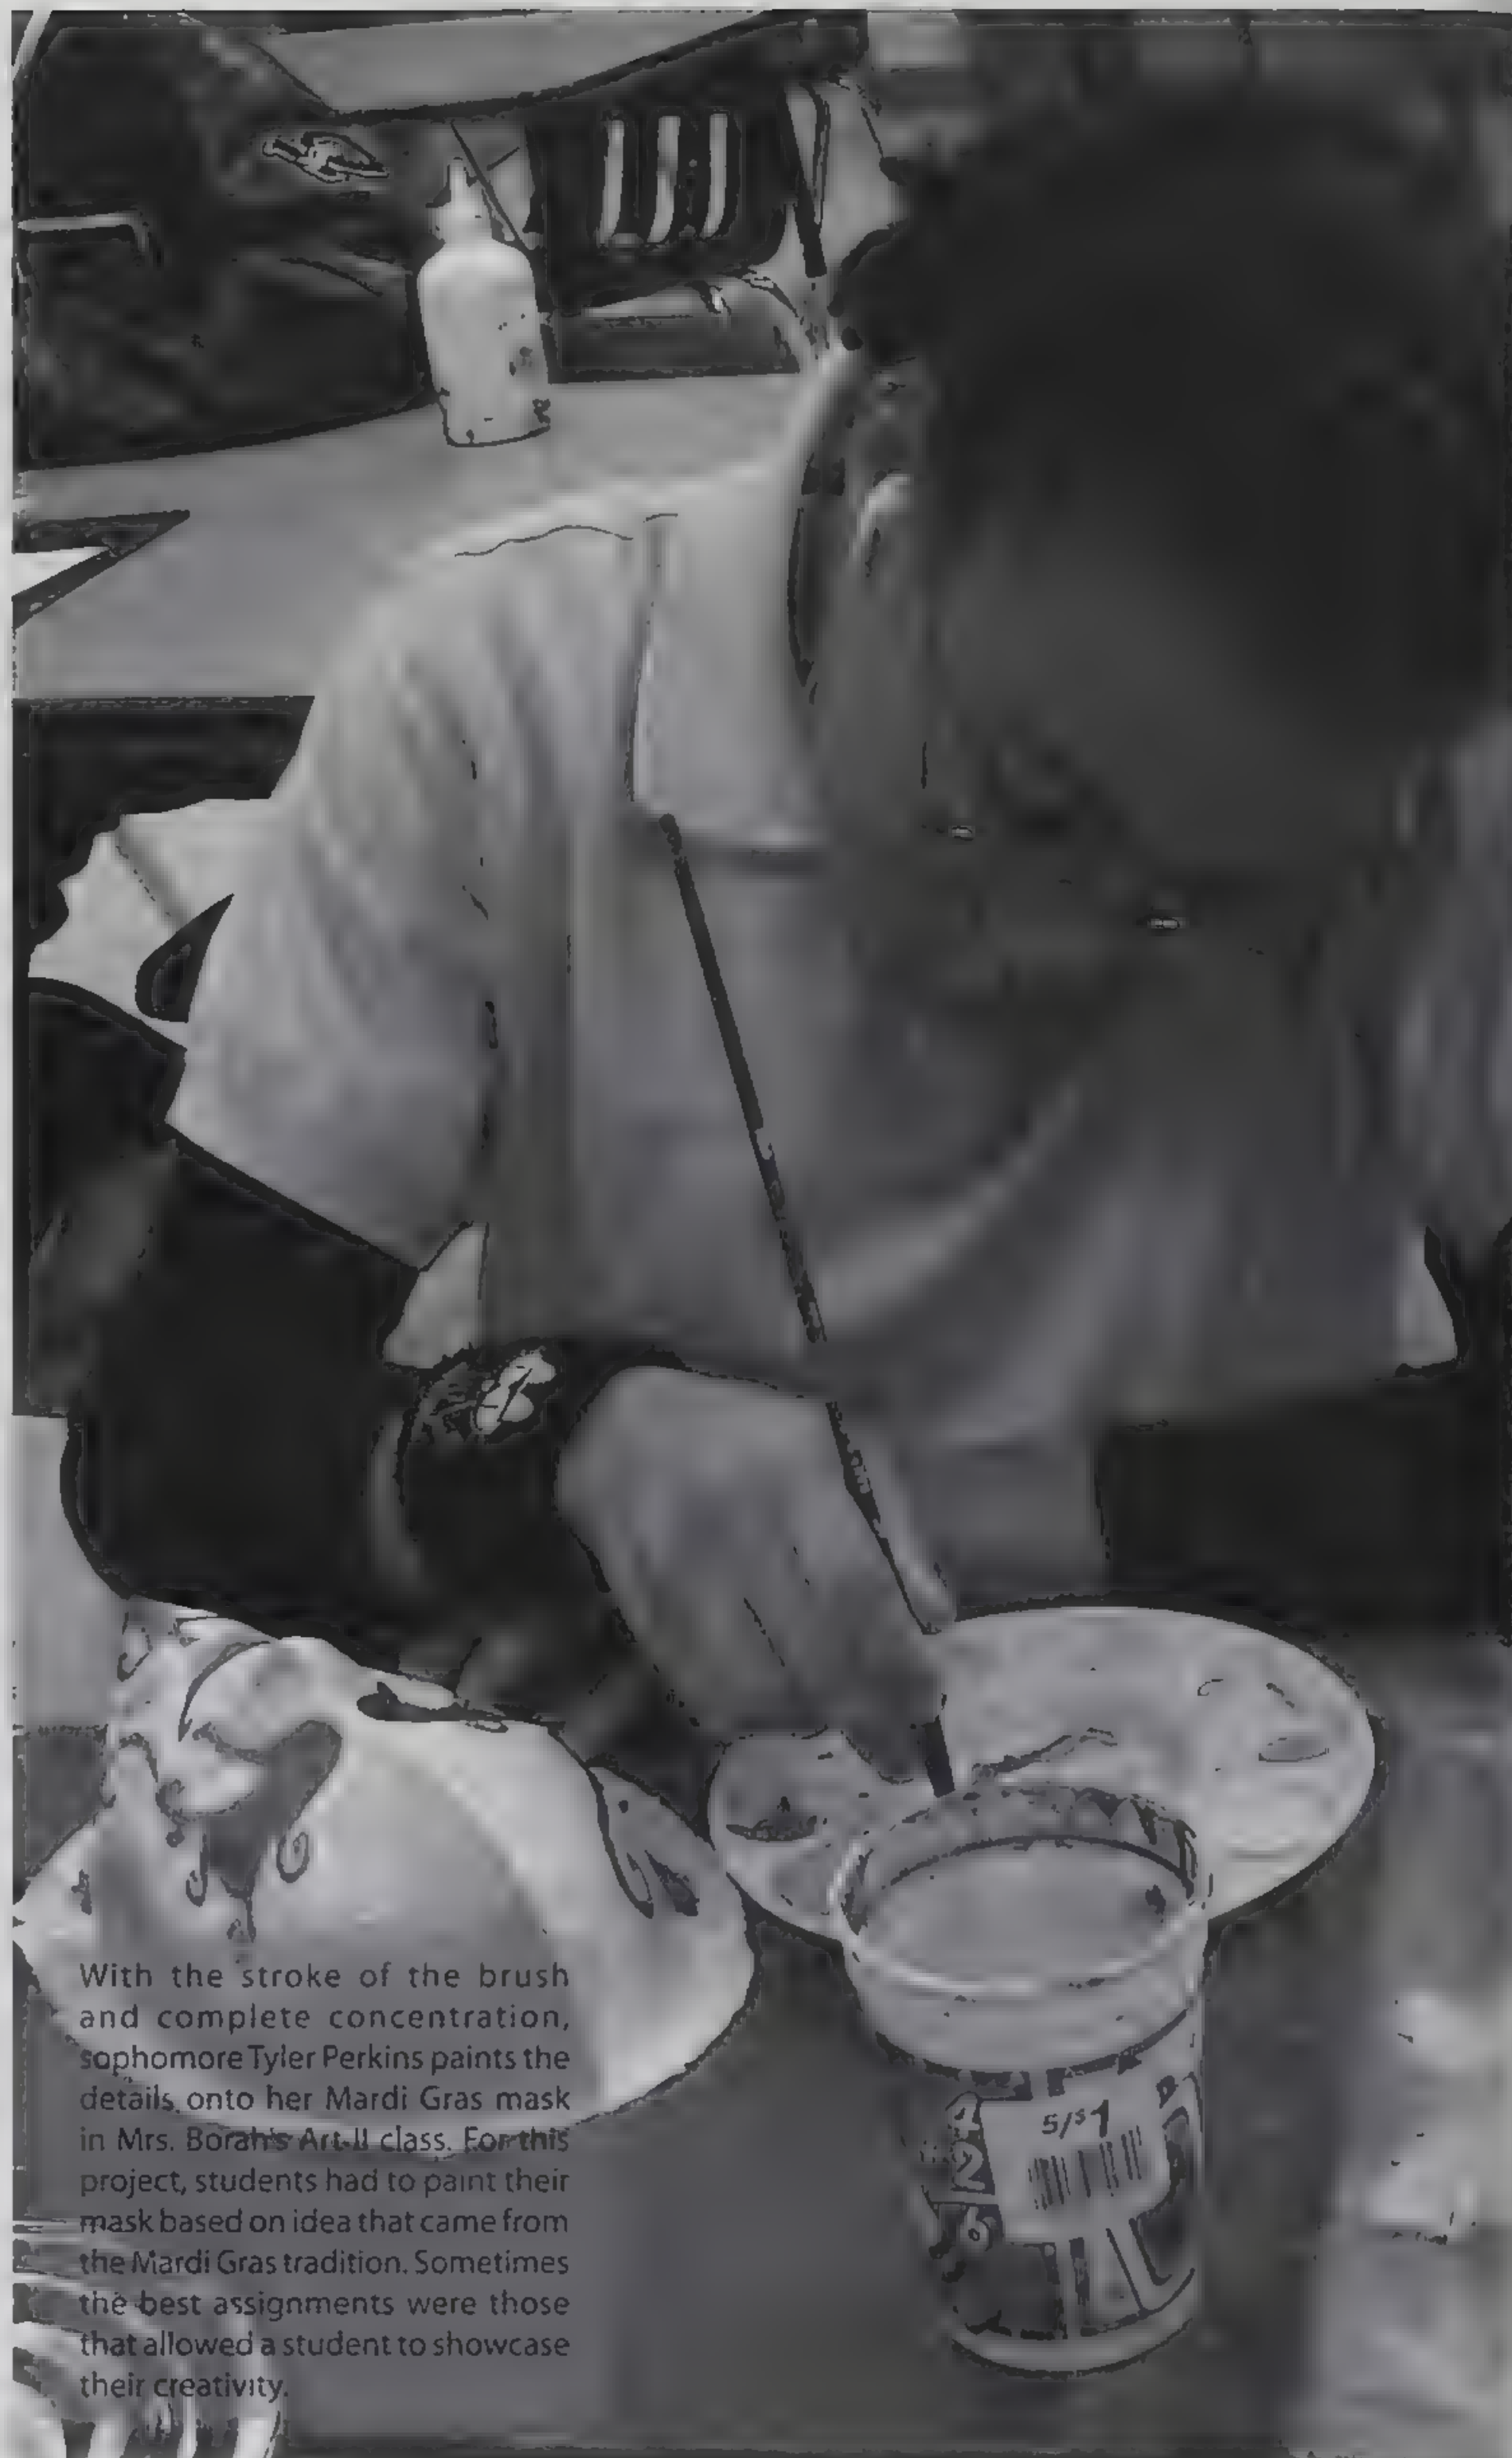

With the touch of his hand, computer science teacher Mr. Shaheen Matuni demonstrates the day's lesson using the new interactive SmartBoard. "I get the benefits of a projector, but with a clearer picture, and instead of going from my computer to the board, I can do everything from the SmartBoard," explained Matuni. "Students gathered for 'campfire' lessons to learn about hardware and software, how to build a computer, and program using Java," he added.

Learning through trial and error, sophomore Nichole O'Bryant measures out just the right amount while being careful not to use too much and ruin her project. Students in Coach Haft's class worked diligently on lab days so they can keep the fun privilege. "I like working in groups and making things way more than I like bookwork," said O'Bryant.

With the stroke of the brush and complete concentration, sophomore Tyler Perkins paints the details onto her Mardi Gras mask in Mrs. Borah's Art-II class. For this project, students had to paint their mask based on idea that came from the Mardi Gras tradition. Sometimes the best assignments were those that allowed a student to showcase their creativity.

ABOVE Proving three heads are better than one, sophomores Xavier Green, Eric Bonner, and Bradley Rohne work together to decipher a clue and finish Mrs. Atlas' scavenger hunt. Not only did students have to figure out clues, but they also had to translate them from Spanish to test their new skills. Sometimes, like this scavenger hunt, when students were participating in fun activities, they could forget they were learning and enjoy their knowledge and skill.

LEFT In the true spirit of the arts, Ms. Brooke's Humanities class portrays Da Vinci's "Last Supper". Acting out various paintings and other art helped the class understand the real meaning of the pieces and feel what the artist was thinking. Senior Kelsey Kayser liked living out the works of art because, "it was a really creative way for us to learn about the artwork, and it also helped me remember the characters in it much better."

What is worse than taking a 150 question short answer test straight from the book? Grading a 150 question short answer test straight from the book. Students, as well as teachers, can't put up with bookwork all the time. Fortunately, the two have come up with a beautiful compromise and developed the idea of projects. Group projects, as well as independent projects, help students apply the knowledge gained from note taking, worksheets, and textbooks in a creative way. Many teachers developed various fun projects for their classes to work on. In Mrs. Atlas' Spanish class, students went on a scavenger hunt to help them understand the importance of following directions; Coach Haft's students made silly putty in lab; Mrs. Cook's calculus students used play-doh to grasp hard concepts; and in Mrs. Naughton's class, students "raised babies" during class. As much fun as we may have had with these projects, we learned throughout the process. Teachers realized that projects could, according to Mrs. Cook, "help cement key concepts better, because they're fun." Many of our projects helped us relate to the real world outside of the school walls. Translating clues as you race the other students to finish the scavenger hunt is great practice for the real world when you're trying to figure out how to get back to your hotel after wandering all around town during your Cancun vacation. Projects like silly putty on the other hand, may teach you the fundamentals necessary to mastering the Scientific Method. We should all be grateful to the creative teachers who take the time to prepare specially designed lessons and innovative project ideas to go along with our book's curriculum.

Fun hands-on activities engage students in learning

Under pressure, senior Victoria Autrey tries her best to answer some tough interview questions from senior Brittney Sims. Coach Teague's Diversified Career Prep class used the mock interviews to gain experience that will be extremely valuable in the real world job market. There are some things just cannot be learned from a textbook.

Interesting FACT

Out of the almost 50 "weddings" Mrs. Worley has planned in her 21 years at KHS, she has only had one bride leave her groom standing at the altar. That bride was Mrs. Whatley! When she was a teacher here, she ran away as fast as she could from Mr. Farmer, the principal, instead of saying "I do!"

Who doesn't love field trips? Whether the trip was to bowling alleys for some social learning, or Six Flags to calculate the mathematical aspects of life, students enjoyed learning outside of the box. Hands on experiences enabled them to get a better perspective of the material being taught in the classroom. "Going to Six Flags gave me a chance to spend time with people I don't always hang out with. I think we deserved a break from the four tough years of math that we all took," senior Georgia O'Brien commented about her day at the amusement park with other Calculus classmates. Senior Erin Hunt added, "It was a last, fun experience for all of us 'Mathletes'". Life Skills student, senior Kim Jonas, explained, "Bowling with friends is fun, and learning how to bowl good is interesting." Even though some trips required worksheets or some type of proof that knowledge was gained from the experience, it was also a fun and unforgettable memory for many. The Kennedale Wildcat Band took "field trips" to another level, and went to Orlando, Florida in May; they not only competed, but also enjoyed the state's amusement parks. "Even though we had to practice for competition, Disney World made up for it. I had a blast," senior flute player, Jerrica Rodriguez commented. Some teachers, like math teacher Mrs. Cook, enjoy the benefits of field trips because "it can provide opportunities for real world applications, and it also enables students to blow off steam." PAL students also took two field trips this year; they traveled to Austin for a PAL conference, and to Camp Thurman to create a stronger bond with one another through a ropes course. "I learned more about myself and discovered many qualities that I never knew I had," senior Kayla Carnagie remarked. Despite the excused absence and make up work, learning beyond the borders benefits students in that they can look back and remember the good times they had with their classmates.

LEFT With the sun glistening on the "newlyweds", senior couple Matt Fletcher and Kelsey Kayser give their final vows. "I pretended to propose to Kelsey during club pictures, and people kept asking me if I was serious," Fletcher commented. This project in sociology helped teach students the process of marrying.

FAR LEFT Hoping for a strike, senior Veronica Gossett goes bowling. "When we go bowling, I have fun and eat somewhere afterwards. I get excited because we don't have to stay in school," she remarked. Bowling helped students in Life Skills enjoy time with friends outside of the school setting.

Regardless of his fear of heights and the pressure to climb over the wall, senior John Avila ascends to the top with cheers coming from fellow PALS at Camp Thurman. "I felt better when they all encouraged me to keep going. I didn't give up because I didn't want to let my friends down." Students learned to appreciate others more, while gaining self-confidence and finding out more about themselves.

BELOW Posing for a quick snap shot, seniors Kayla Carnagie, Mandy Seremet, Hannah Anderson, and Kallie Newman, soak up the sun at Six Flags Over Texas. Students were told to observe how Calculus can be used in the real world. "I like being with all the other nerds, but I also learned that you can use Calculus outside of the school," Newman stated

FAR BELOW Despite the warm heat and expensive vendors, junior Sam Hunyh and seniors Reanelle Navea and Samantha Hartsel, enjoyed the day at Six Flags with the Calculus and Physics classes. "I had a great time. Riding the roller coasters made me realize that everything had to deal with math somehow," said Navea.

LEFT Amongst youthful minds, senior Conor Donohue relaxes on the floor. "I had fun with the children," shared Donohue, "I felt like I could interact a little more and keep them involved with the play." In The Nose Tree, the actors would sit between laughing children, waiting for their cue; this kept the kids interested in the acting rather than getting restless

Did You Know FACT

Field trips have been proven to help students of any age learn about 10-20% more information than being in the classroom alone. Maybe we should take more field trips?

Letting their guard down for a brief moment, the drum majors show their unity as band leaders. "I enjoyed being a leader and telling people what to do because it is just part of my personality," shared senior Jeff Macias. Seniors LaCameya Roper and Kyle Stevenson also participated as drum majors. "Coinciding with my reputation as a Nazi drum major, I used my powers to enforce perfection with the threat of push-ups," shared Stevenson.

In stride with the rest of the band, junior Zac Kolanowski focuses on playing perfectly in tune during the band's Homecoming performance. "I always wanted to join band because playing an instrument came easier to me than being in Art or Theatre. I heart band," commented Kolanowski. Kolanowski has been in band every year he has been in high school.

defining FACT

Under the hot summer sun, the band endured 6 hours of intense practice each day for 3 weeks before school even started. Now that's dedication!

Showing off their impressive drumming skills, senior Cameron Garland and junior Vincent Pham march to the beat while performing during halftime at a football game. "When it came down to choosing an instrument, I chose the drums because I enjoyed using my hands and it turned out that I was really good at it," shared Garland.

Taking part in the UTA Marching Festival, the Wildcat Band shows off their immense talent by placing in the first district category for the competition. "Going to competitions is always really fun because you get to miss school and hang out with your friends all day," shared junior Vincent Pham. The UTA Marching festival was made up of a number of different competitions that the band attended throughout the year.

Band continues to build their award-winning program

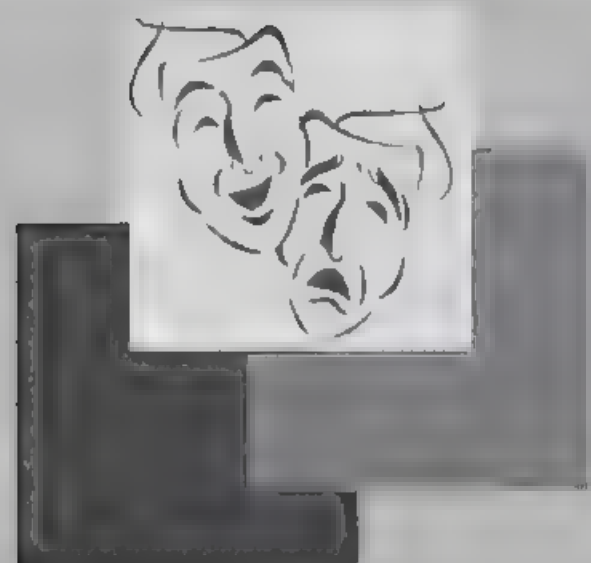

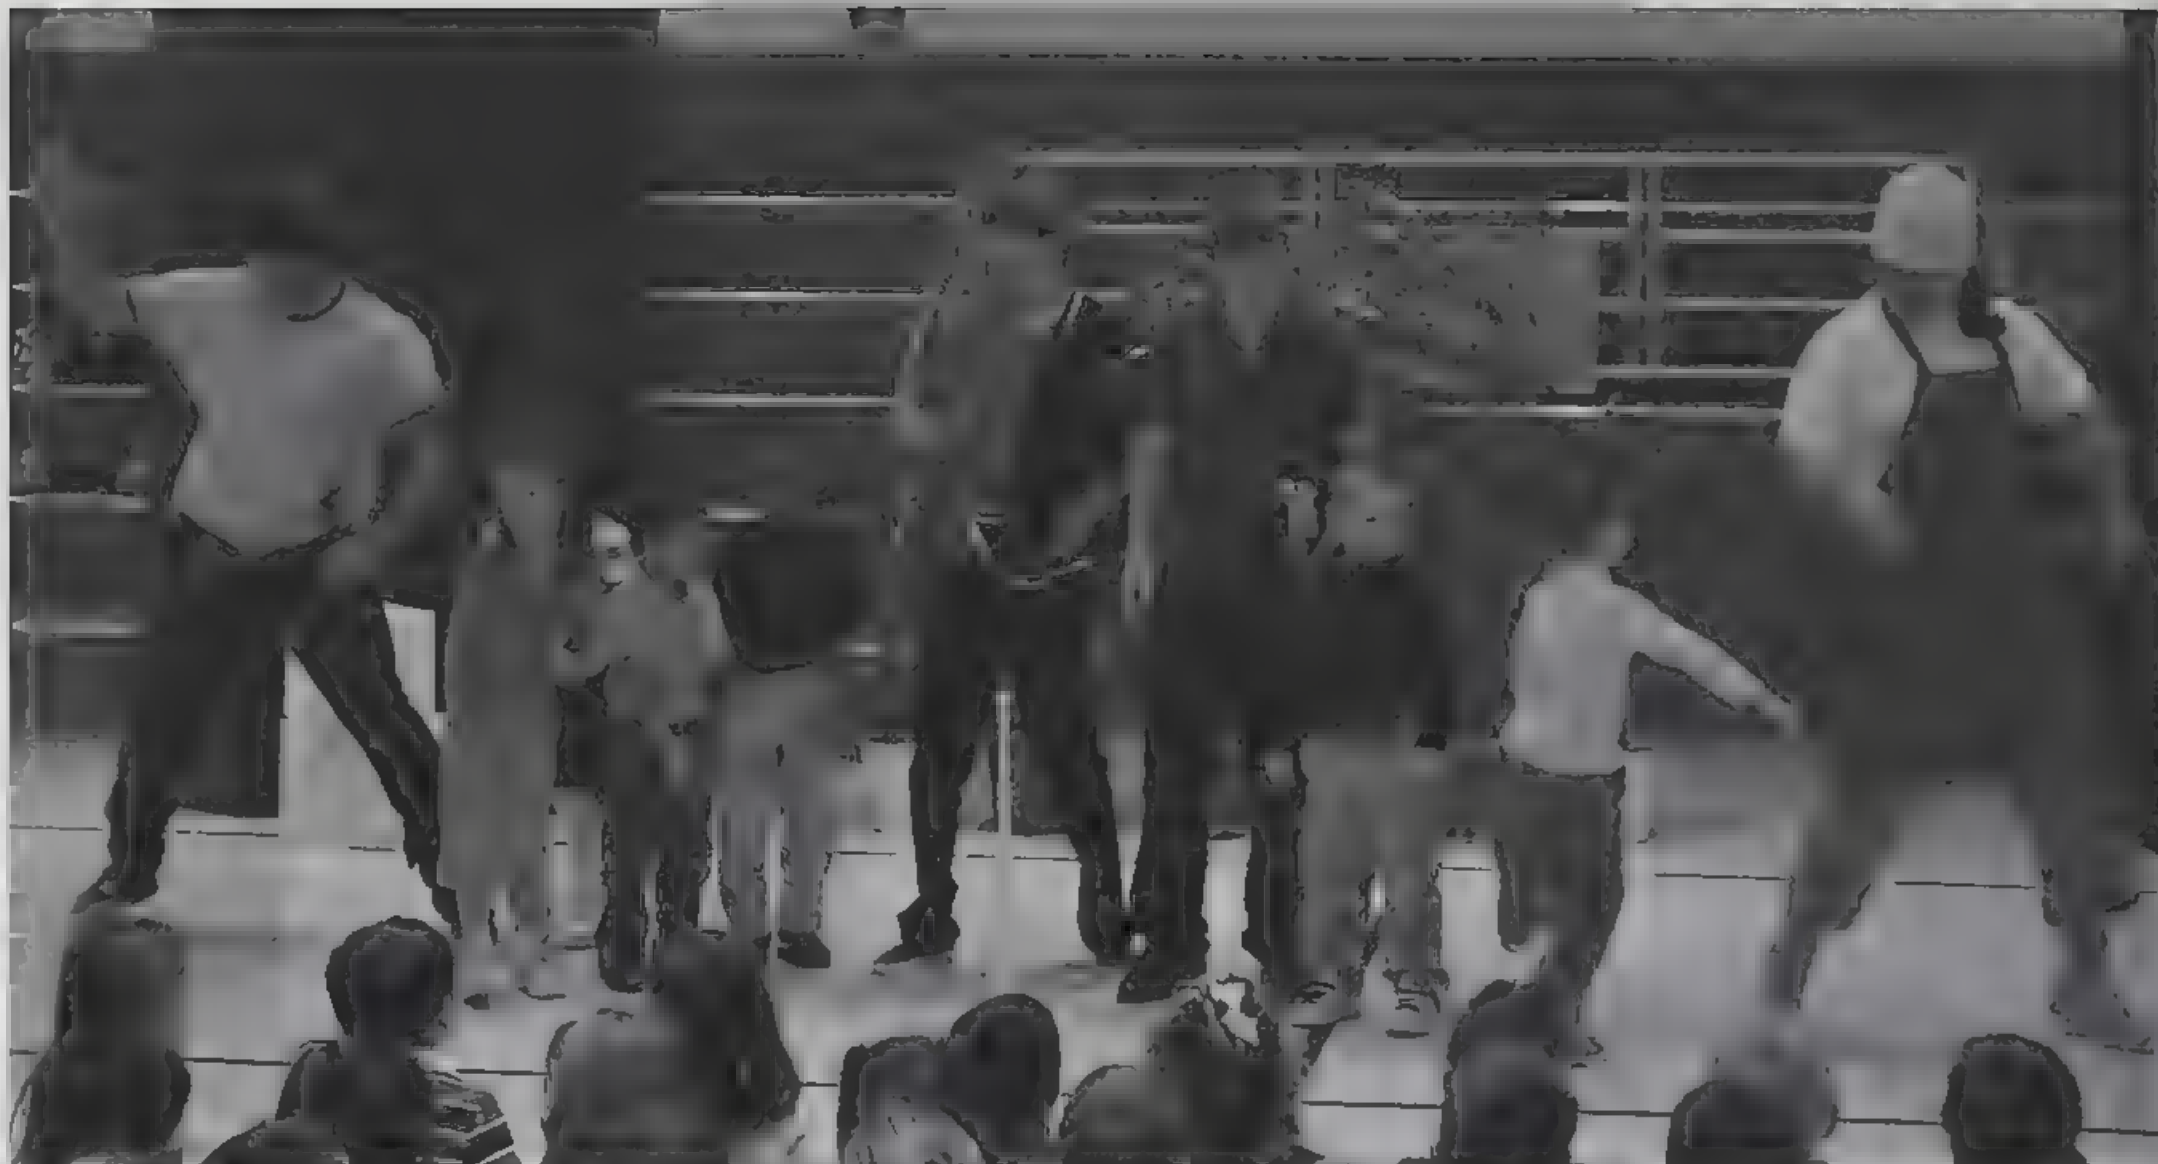

Starting the season off with band camp beginning weeks before the first day of school, the band got their usual head start by learning and practicing new routines for the year. Band camp lasted from eight in the morning until two in the afternoon with only a lunch break and the summer heat to interrupt their efficient efforts. This year's camp helped prepare the band for yet another successful routine for the half-time show at every football game, followed by earning another sweepstakes at the annual UIL Marching competition for the third year in a row. So much prosperity could not have been accomplished had it not been for the band's experienced and talented leaders. With the largest band in Kennedale history, an extra drum major was needed. This year's drum majors consisted of seniors LaCameya Roper, Kyle Stevenson, and Jeff Macias. "I like leading the band to success because it brings out my excellent leadership qualities," commented Roper. Another factor in the band's success would have to have been its experienced and well-rehearsed seniors. "We had more seniors this year in comparison to all the previous years that I have been in band. Since we were all so seasoned, I felt like this year was our best chance to succeed in everything we attempted," shared senior Erik Hackett. "I feel like Mr. Oktay will miss our class of seniors the most," said senior tenor saxophone player John Avila. Despite it being the last year for a majority of the band, many members could find happiness in the band's annual trip. This year the band went to Walt Disney World in May for a competition and performed in a Disney World parade.

Interesting FACT

To prepare for the 3 performances this year, the actors rehearsed for over 600 hours, usually staying up past 11pm at school. That shows discipline and dedication.

Moving to the music in The Nose Tree, sophomore Jackson Woodside, senior Conor Donohue, and juniors Cory Kennedy and Bryan Stites put on a show for the children of R.F. Patterson. "Performing at the elementary schools and interacting with kids was a cool experience. I want them to know that they can keep their fun despite growing older," commented Woodside.

With the spotlight

actors come together to put on performances of a lifetime

Exciting things were happening around room 303 this past year. With a play, a musical, and a One-Act-Play entry, the theatre students were kept busy throughout the school year. The actors spent their rehearsal times memorizing lines and perfecting blocking to keep the shows running smoothly. The technical crew spent countless hours preparing for and operating all of the technical aspects of the productions. "I am a techie because I like working with the technical stuff and making sure everyone sounds good, but it can get confusing with the channels and everything. The best part is getting to feel responsible for the well-being of the show," shared junior Ryan Adams. Techies, i.e. the costumes, makeup, props, and stage managers do their part in holding up the show. This year's musical, Little Shop of Horrors, included a performance by drama director, Mr. Doug Parker. "I had a really great time working with the cast and just being a part of it, and also making faces at Ms. Jacobi backstage." Mr. Parker provided the voice for the giant plant villain in the show. One of the puppeteers for the plant, senior Elise Martinez, worked the plant from the inside. "I had a lot of fun with Little Shop, but it was way harder than it looked. The hardest part was keeping up when Mr. Parker would ad-lib and I had to move the plant with his words. Also, it was really hot in there and I had to sit inside it for an entire scene." Little Women was performed in the fall and again at One-Act-Play, resulting in one advancement to the Area competition. Overall, everyone agreed that the times spent in theatre was worth the sacrifice.

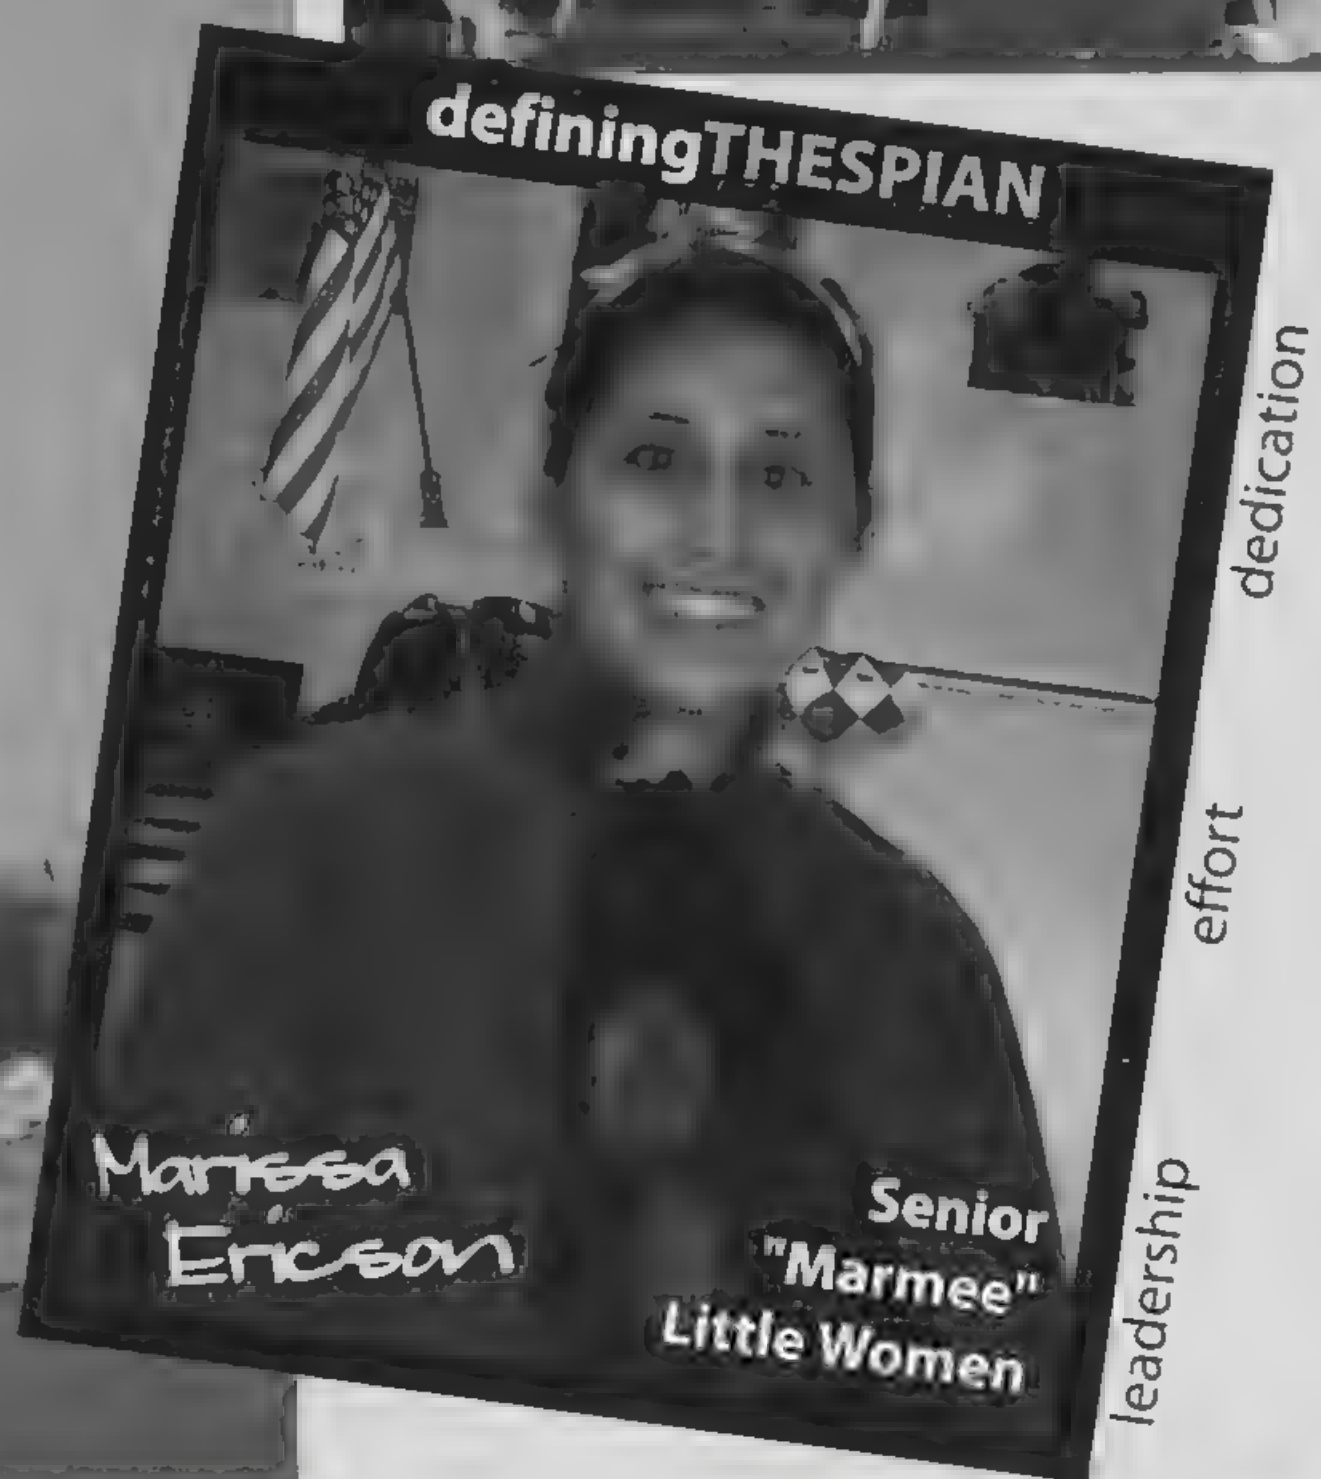

LEFT Reaching, out of curiosity, junior Mike Reed 'feeds' the plant blood as Seymour in Little Shop of Horrors. "I was really nervous to be the lead in the musical because it was my first time ever to do anything with theatre," shared Reed, "But because I loved it and all of the fun people, I plan to keep participating in theatre."

BELOW Aspiring to amaze, senior Hannah Anderson, portraying 'Audrey' in Little Shop of Horrors, prances around the floral shop. "I really liked being in the musical. It was my first," commented Anderson, "Being with people I would have never met broadened the range of people I am friends with. I plan to do musical theatre in the future."

Gathered around as a family, seniors Erin Hunt, Marissa Ericson, Kristin Maniord, and juniors Sheri Snell and Ceara Swille stay in character during a performance of Little Women. "The people in theatre make it fun," said Snell, "It's exciting to become someone other than yourself." Little Women advanced to area in the One Act Play competition, thanks to the directing and practice put in to the show.

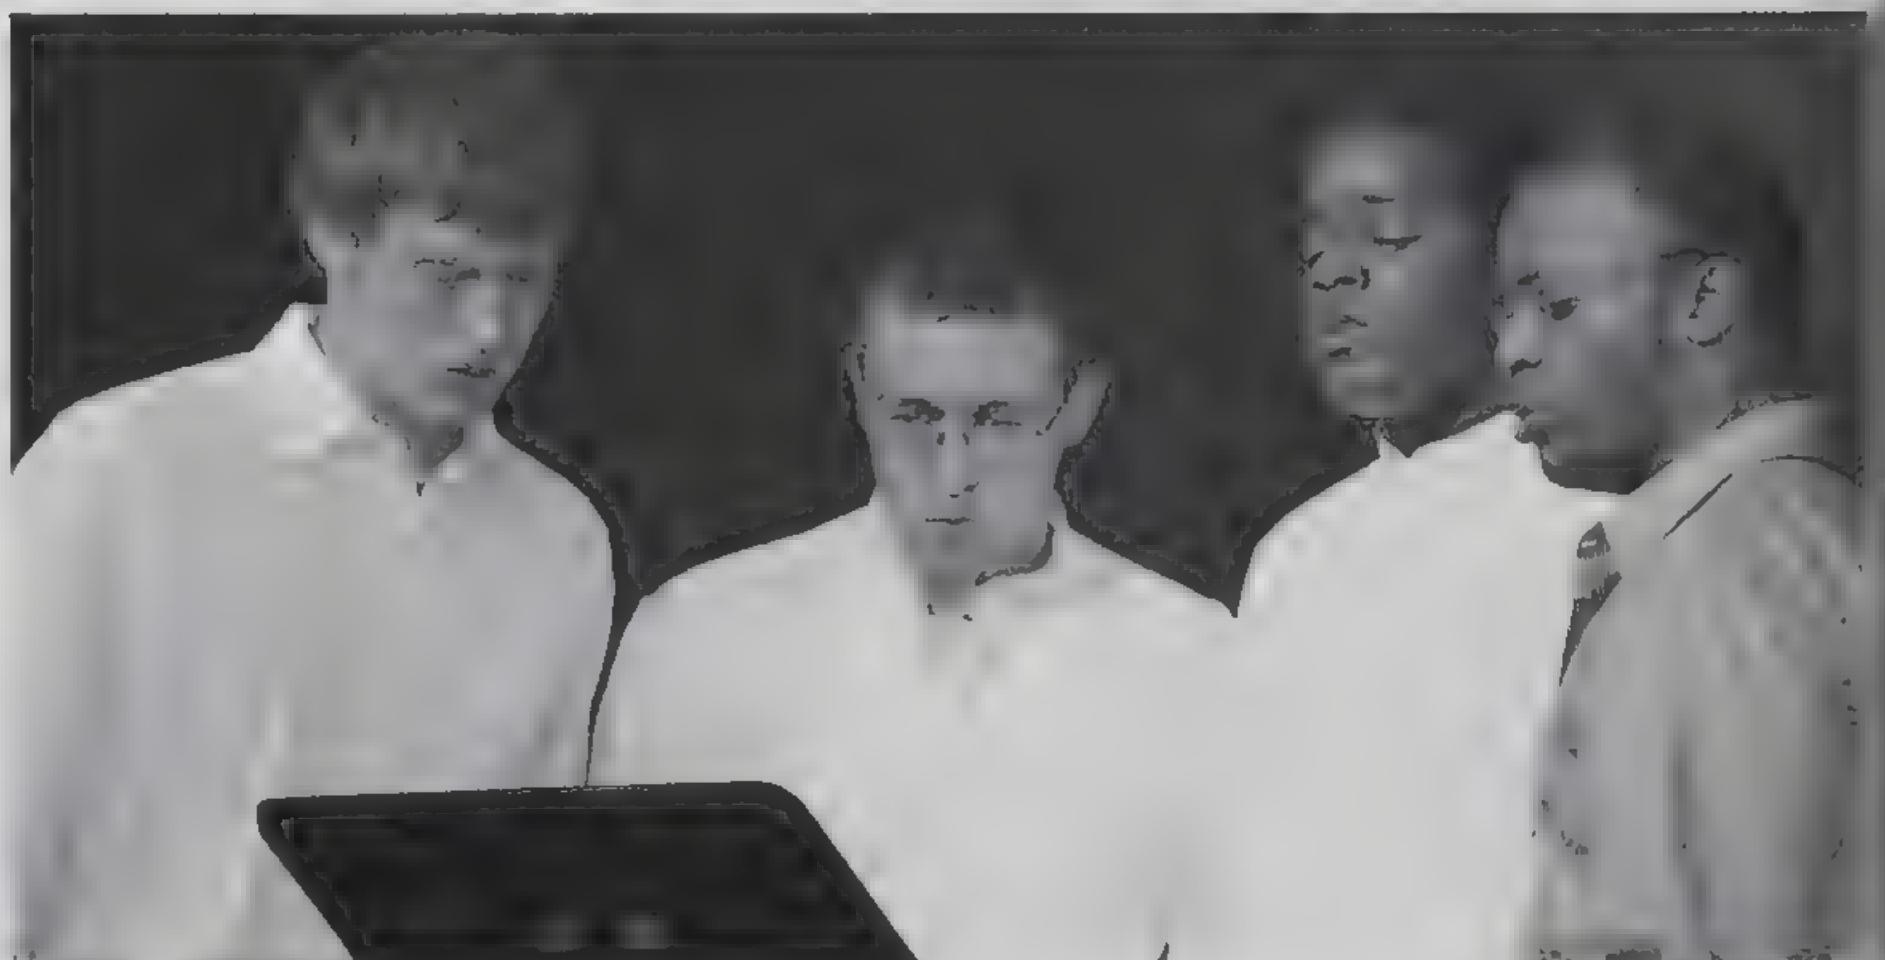

In harmony, several of the school's choirs sing out during the winter's Holiday Concert. "It was a showcase of many different talents; an amazing musical experience. I don't think the Hallelujah finale could have gone any better than it did," confessed choir director Sara Jacobi. Being able to come together for a song or two was a unique and wonderful opportunity which sounded perfectly in tune.

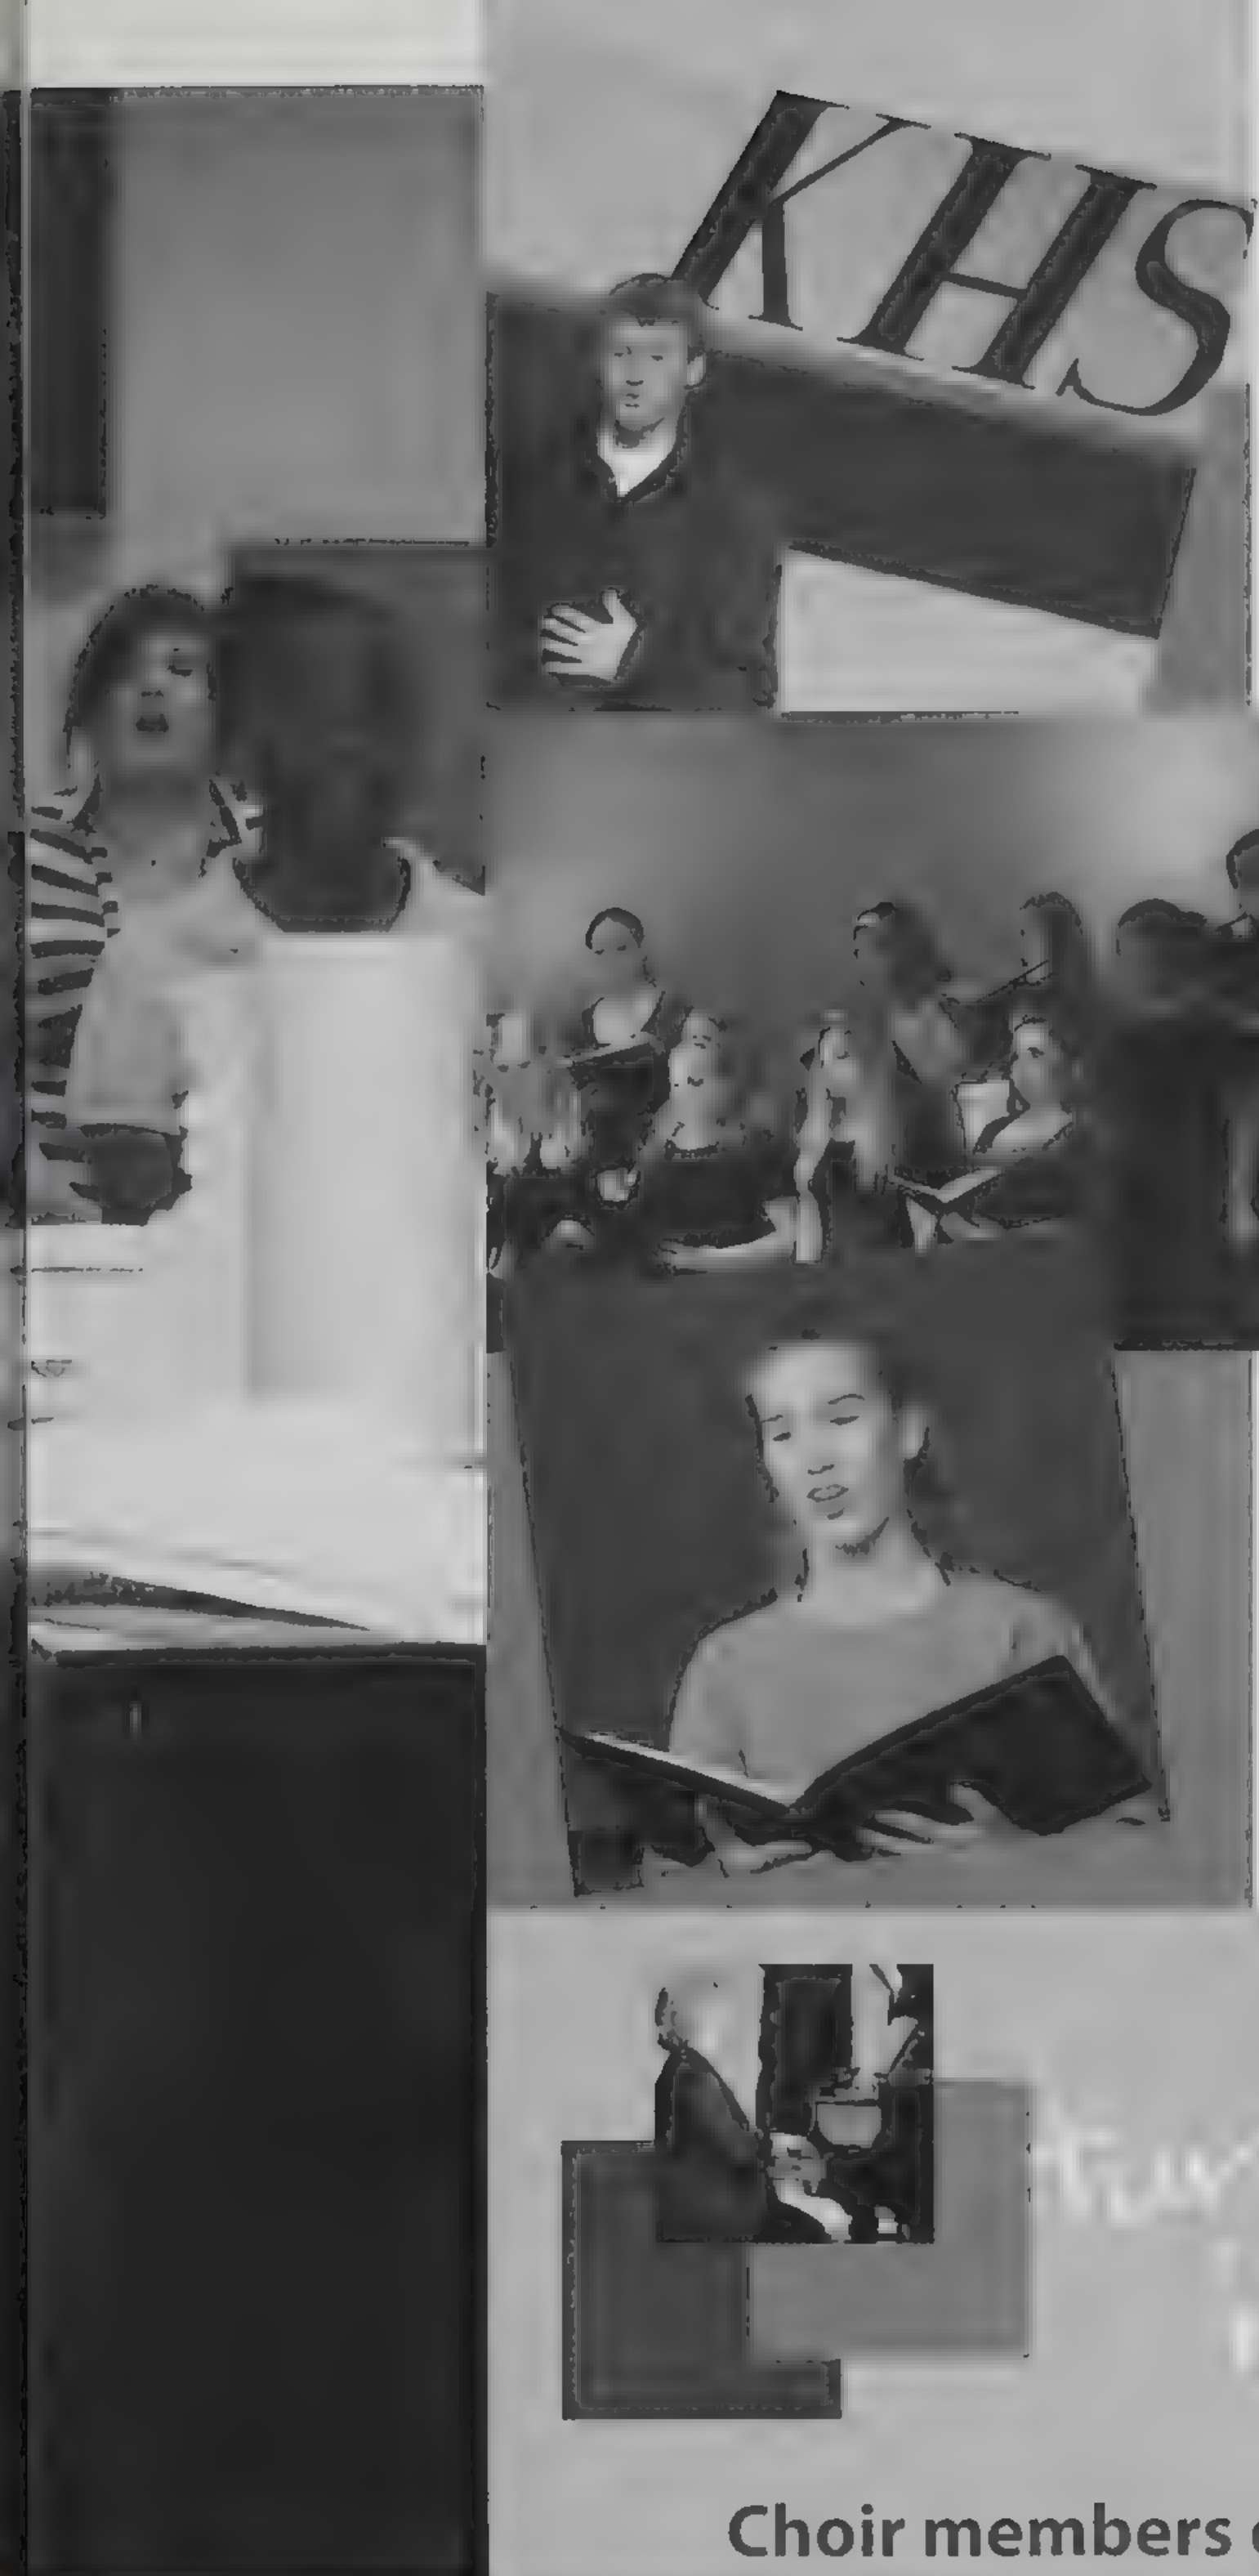

ABOVE With a heavy heart, senior Megan Weathers sings a solo one last time on the Kennedale High School stage. "It was really emotional because I realized this was the last time I would ever be on this stage; I was nervous and many people were crying while the performances by seniors were going on," expressed Weathers. She will be attending the University of North Texas, pursuing the field of vocal performance.

RIGHT Hitting the notes, sophomores Chris Marks and Justin Weathers, freshman Brian Franks, and graduate Job Nyang'au team up for a quartet at the Holiday Concert. "It was fun, but we really had to listen to each other while singing," commented Marks. He qualified for State in Solo and Ensemble, the only state winner from Kennedale this year, and got the chance to travel down to Austin to compete.

Keeping the beat, sophomore Alexandria Maniord listens and repeats the notes for Moon River, a song performed at the Spring Concert. "We warmed up everyday, and then listened to each other to figure out if we were all balanced. Ms. Jacobi helped us out on finding the notes, but when she stopped, it was much harder to find where we were supposed to be," explained Maniord.

When you think about choir, the first thing you think is music. To the choir members, however, the first thing that comes to mind is the core leader of the program, director Sara Jacobi. This year was Ms. Jacobi's first year as the choir teacher for Kennedale High School; she replaced Ms. Jennifer Garner, the previous year's choir instructor. Dedication runs through the veins of this proud leader; she was always available after school when needed and practiced at least an hour each day on her own voice, which had to be in good shape in order to teach her students properly. "Jac is the best choir teacher we've ever had!" commented senior Chris Chreene, teacher's aide for the fourth period varsity treble choir as well as a varsity member. After a certain point in time, Jacobi wants to become an opera singer. She performed throughout May in Turandot as a chorus member at the Bass Hall; she eagerly awaits a chance to play a lead role in her desired profession. When asked about what she has gained through this whole experience, Jacobi replied, "I love it! Singing music with incredibly talented students is so wonderful." Many people in the audience of the various concerts often wondered why the choirs sing so many foreign songs, "It gives the students a broad prospective of music history from all types of western music groups," enlightened Ms. Jacobi. Many students were awarded for their talent and dedication at the Fine Arts Banquet and at the Awards Ceremony. Ms. Jacobi continues to demonstrate her passion for music, and her students have one thing to say about her classes: "If you don't know choir, you don't know JAC!"

Choir members dedicate themselves to the life of music

Quick to learn, the seniors join together for one last song with one another. "I think it was a pretty cool last thing to do as seniors," mentioned senior Andy Ritter. They sung You'll Never Walk Alone by Rogers and Hammerstein; they received this piece on the day of the concert and had only thirty minutes to practice it, which explained why they had their music with them on stage to carry out the song.

There has been a special group of young ladies who have amazed the halftime audience with their sparkle and shine during the football season. The love for this performing art shows in the eyes of its young members. There were only fifteen members this, and the majority were freshmen, however, that didn't stop the guard from being the best in years. In addition to the new members, this season was also one of the Colorguard's best because of their new sponsor, Tracy Cupp. The girls had been without a sponsor for two years were extremely happy to finally have one. "The instructor and the girls were amazing this year and did their best," exclaimed junior captain Elizabeth Olvera. The Colorguard plans on competing and winning at state in the upcoming season. "I'm very confident that we will make it to state next year," quoted sophomore Angela Folmar. The team can't wait until next year when they can make the field shine bright once more and bring home a Colorguard title!

FCCLA starts up again with new sponsor

Always devoted, the members of the FCCLA (Family, Career, and Community Leadership of America) worked to better themselves and their community. "It is like NHS, but without the grades," informed junior Stacia Newton. FCCLA was headed by Teresa Allred who worked with the group to preform acts of kindness, such as community service to help out less fortunate families. It also helped in preparing students to handle family, career, and community problems with a positive outlook. FCCLA has been an exciting new club, added only this year. In addition to gaining experience for the future and learning what the club is, the members also gained humility and grace from helping others. "I always feel so humble when I help others; FCCLA helped prepare me for the challenges I will face in life," commented Breanna Abair. The members of this new club had lots of fun and made new friends not only at school, but in the surrounding communities. FCCLA members cannot wait for next year as they can make the club better with more experience.

led by president Bailey Turner, all of the officers and members on student council worked around the clock to help our school achieve a nicer, more spirited learning environment. Sponsored by speech and communications teacher Sherri Wade, student council initiated many new projects that will become more and more regular throughout the years. For example, every Wednesday, student council worked with K.I.S.S club to make rounds throughout the school to collect papers from teachers and students for recycling. Student council was also responsible for planting numerous plants and shrubs around the school. The added vegetation certainly gave the school a more inviting look due to the many construction projects still in progress. Student council also put out a weekly newspaper on Fridays allowing students to be more aware of the events and special occasions planned. All the activities were part of their goal to make students more spirited.

Students come together to help community children

A new reigning era came to the PAL program due to the absence of the former sponsor, Mrs. Janek. A new teacher had to step up and fill the enormous shoes left by Mrs. Janek. "I love Mrs. Janek a lot. She was so cool, but Mrs. Naughton has done a really good job this year," shared senior PAL John Avila. Even with a new teacher, the annual field trips took place as usual. The PALs started off by attending Camp Thurman's 'Rope's Course.' They spent the day participating in group bonding activities that involved running, lifting, climbing, and a rubber chicken. Part of 'Rope's Course' was learning to trust the people you were with and learn to face your fears. Later in the year, PALs attended PAL Conference in Austin. It was held at Akins High School where they attended various classes that dealt with a variety of issues. Each class the PALs attended helped them become aware of issues their friends, themselves, and their PALees would face throughout the year and how to deal with them. The classes helped many PALs help their PALees at the younger schools more effectively.

When people turn a blind eye to the less fortunate, Key Club steps in and takes a stand. The purpose of the club is to care for others and be a person of service. "I really enjoyed Key Club. Helping people and the community are my hobbies, and the club has helped me do that," shared Mitchell King. Key Club went to Pecan Manor nursing home and spent time with the elderly, providing friendly faces and good times for those that live there. Senior Bailey Turner explained, "Going to the home in Kennedale and playing bingo with the residents was very cool because we spent time with those that are usually forgotten when you think of 'the community.'" The amount of time put into benefitting the community was a small sacrifice compared to the warm feelings gained in the end. Key Club was a great way for students to get in touch with their caring sides.

National Honor Society shapes future leaders

The National Honor Society is open to the teaching of future leaders in being the best they can be while serving others and being honorable citizens. Dedication as a top priority, Ms. Worley and Mr. Burke led society members to realize the responsibility and necessity of their community service to the mass of the student body and the towns of Kennedale and Arlington. "I haven't done community service since I was getting hours for my Confirmation Class; this program definitely helped me feel one with my community again, which is a great feeling of knowing that you are helping out your town," expressed next year's secretary Hillary Schwind. Although the senior officers are going to be deeply missed, the new officers are readily prepared to take their positions to lead in the upcoming year. Confidence is gained through intense preparation in high school and college for the tough competition and fearless aggression in the business world. Business Professionals of America has enabled students to sample what it is going to be like in their futures. "It has made me more experienced and well known to the business world by exposing many opportunities that may be open to me someday," BPA president, senior Kevin Tran explained. Tran earned first in regionals, for computer security concept, and competed at State. BPA students had to focus on a specific software category and take their knowledge to various competitions against other schools. Not only will the organization benefit the next generation of imminent professionals, it has already helped some students in their classes. "I learned to become more competitive in the industry and it also helped me accomplish the senior slideshow," commented senior Cindy Vu, vice president of BPA. Yearbook pulls together during absence of the sponsor

In a struggle, the yearbook staff has had to overcome the prolonged absence of their adviser Ashley Coffman. Coffman left on maternity leave in February, leaving the responsibilities of the yearbook to her right-hand editor, senior Kayla Carnagie. "I felt as if all the pressure was on me, which stressed me out; but I kept in touch with her through e-mails. I had to make sure everything went smoothly and the pages were done and edited," Carnagie stated. Students gained independence and self discipline through upcoming deadlines, and learned that procrastination was unacceptable. "It became very hectic and unorganized when Mrs. Coffman left, but we all managed to get things done and it taught us to be responsible," shared junior Britney Zurovetz. "At times it seemed like we wouldn't make it, but thanks to hard work we made it through," said senior Jena Burger. Despite all of the chaos and confusion, deadlines and stress, the yearbook staff pulled through together as a class, and made it a successful year that many will remember.

Art Club took on the year with brushes in hand. They came together after school every other week at art gatherings to work on ceiling tiles. They painted elaborate designs and funny cartoons on them, depending on the student. "I actually finished my art tile this year," junior Bryan Stites shared, "It took a while for me to think up ideas for it, but in the end, I just let the brush do the imagining." The club held an art show competition in the cafeteria on the 8th of February where junior Parker Ott placed first, junior Nelly Mercado in a close second, and senior Jordan Meaux in third. "Parker has his own style," commented Mercado, "I was just happy enough coming second to him with my talent; it was like an honor being that close to winning." The Art Club's agenda remained full throughout the year with events from painting faces at homecoming to visiting the Forth Worth Museum of Modern Arts. Art club members agree it was well worth their time.

KISS

Kindness in Students Spreads

Kiss club helps brighten peoples' days throughout the year

The KISS (Kindness In Students Spreads) club is a group of caring individuals looking for ways to help others anywhere and way that they can. Helping others is more than just a simple kind act. By simply picking up a person's pencil in class, or helping a peer with a hard math problem, someone's day can be changed. KISS club does their best to find anything they can to do, everyday, to help someone out. The group started the year off by sending care packages to a soldier in Iraq. The club was also in charge of "KISS a Senior Goodbye." This involved letting students send a chocolate kiss and little note to their senior friends leaving at the end of the year. KISS club also hung every students name and birthday on bulletin boards in the hallways to make the student body feel special. KISS club has constantly put others before themselves and showed their kindness, hoping it would spread, starting a chain reaction of kindness. Alicia Underwood stated, "I love being a part of KISS club because it is a wonderful feeling knowing I can make people smile."

Purpose

To spread kindness among students.

The UIL Academic season started off this year at the District Meet held at Hillsboro High where a number of students ranging from grade levels 9 to 12 competed in various academic competitions. This year a number of medals were brought home by the usual returning competitors, but also some new faces as well. Freshman Fahad Ali placed second at his first attempt at Ready Writing. Senior Daniel McGuyer placed first at his first attempt at Literary Criticism. Seniors Michael Ivison, Mandy Seremet, Philip Rogers, and Amanda Mantooth took home the first place trophy as well, but for Computer Science. The Social Studies team did extremely well, taking home another first place trophy. The teams in Current Events and Literary Criticism took home a second place trophy. Although no students advanced to the state competition, many advanced to the regional competition in Commerce and did well with places just outside of the cutoff.

Students come together to share and discuss their religion

Sponsored by Mr. Matuni and Ms. Pollard, Generation Revival is a club put together by senior Michael Ivison and junior Parker Ott. It took place during each lunch on Mondays and Fridays. Generation Revival allowed students to join in with fellow peers in a Bible study and discussion with the occasional addition of music by those with the ability to play. "I play the drums, but it's kind of hard to play inspirational music in the middle of lunch with just a drum set," shared founder Ivison. Others led inspirational songs by playing the guitar or singing. Other than playing inspirational music, the students took turns leading discussions that usually began with a sermon prepared by one of the students. Following the lesson, a discussion of opinions and thoughts from the students in the audience gave everyone a chance to participate. "It's very cool to listen to other people's opinions and thoughts," shared junior Bryan Stites. It is a good opportunity for those with similar views to come together and discuss their thoughts and questions with fellow peers.

Purpose

To invite teens to join fellowship with other students without feeling ridiculed or suppressed.

To my special Princess....

Life is as easy as you make it, if you keep it simple. The choices you make will determine the actions you take. Live life like there is no tomorrow. Forgive and move on when necessary. Remember family is forever. Always try your hardest at everything you do and never give up. Take the time to thank our Father God for the simple blessings in life and all you have. Know that you hold a special place in my heart!!

Love always and forever!!
Dad

Wow!!! Your senior year. How did the time slip away so fast? Seems like only yesterday we were sending you off to kindergarten - and now you're a senior. There are so many things we want to say to you but, unfortunately, this limited page will not allow it. Suffice it to say we are VERY proud of you and all you have accomplished and love you beyond all boundaries. You have the ability to do ANYTHING you set your heart and mind to. You are an AWESOME granddaughter, a beautiful young lady, and have made our second go around with kids something to be remembered. The future is up to you. Go at it like you have everything in your life - FULL SPEED. We will always be with you and believe in you 100%.

Mir,
I'm going to miss you when you go off to college, but I sure am going to enjoy all the extra space. Do good like I know you can & remember your little brother at home.

Love,
Jake

Love Forever,
Papa & Granny

Chelsey,

We love you more than you will ever know, we are so incredibly proud of you and all of your accomplishments. We know that you will be able to go out into the world and become whatever your heart desires. Your strong character, intelligence, dedication, and loyalty are traits that will lead to even more success in your future. We look forward to following you in your new adventures as you continue your education at TCU. Go hornfrogs!

Love Forever,
Mom and Dad

Chelsey,

It seems like only yesterday mom and dad were bringing you home from the hospital. Wow...time sure does fly!! We've always had so much fun together. Do you remember how we would jump in my car and sing the whole way to wherever we were going? I bet we sang, "Always be my Baby" a million times. Then there were the pallets we would make on the floor to watch "Charmed" each week. It was our special alone time to just watch the show and have fun. We have so many memories...funny memories...WITCHES!!!! I look forward to many more memories with my kid sis! I am so proud of you and know that you will go far in all that you do!

Love ya bunches,
Erica (Sissy)

Ryan

We are so very proud of you and all that you have accomplished. There are so many exciting opportunities waiting on you. We are confident that you will be successful in all of your endeavors. One of the keys to reaching these achievements is: "Try not to become a man of success but rather to become a man of value." - Albert Einstein. You are admired for setting high goals and earnestly striving to reach them. You have lived by this statement "You see things and you say "Why?" But I dream things that never were and I say "Why not?" - George Bernard Shaw

Always put the Lord first and allow him to guide your footsteps. Be strong, be happy and enjoy each and every moment of your life. Remember, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me." Philippians 4:13. The best is yet to come. You are special, important and valued. You are the one and only R. Collins.

We have always been and we will always be in your corner. We love you now and forever!!!!

Mom, Dad, MoMo, Cimoya, Breshaun, and Jazmine

I remember the first time we met; we were going to see the movie Flubber. I was so excited that day to have finally met my little brother. Through the years I have watched you grow from a little boy to a young man. Words can not explain how proud I am of you and your accomplishments, but the best is yet to come. You are going to do great things in college - continue striving for your goals.

Love Your Big Sister,
Cimoya AKA C

Kayla Carnagie

Kayla,
You were the cream filling in the Oreo for us... You have always had a determination that has been unstoppable and has always amazed me. I know that whatever you want... you will achieve. Without a doubt.
It's been a long, tough road getting here, but you've worked hard and it's paid off. We're very proud of you and always will be.
You just might change the world.
Love ya always, Dad, Mom, Sissy, and Kelsie

A quote for you to remember... "I was this close." Love, Sissy

Kelli Paige Grimes

Dear Kelli,
Congratulations on your graduation!
There is no limit to what you can do in life when you put your faith and trust in Jesus! Jeremiah 29:11 pretty much sums it all up. "For I know the plans
I have for you," declares the Lord,
"plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future."

We love you with all our hearts!
Dad, Mom, Logan, Maddi,
Daisee and Lillie

Amanda Mantooth

Amanda Jeretta,
You are not only beautiful on the outside but you are beautiful on the inside as well. You have such a tender heart filled with compassion and kindness. You have a laugh and a smile that can melt anyone's heart!

We are so very proud of everything you have accomplished and all the dreams you have ahead of you. I can't believe how fast time has passed, it seems like yesterday you were going to kindergarten and now you are graduating!
We love you so very much!
Dad, Mom, Emily

Charley Gonzalez

Charleen, What a journey! We are very proud of all your accomplishments. You are a fighter and we know that you will succeed in life. This is the beginning to a new and exciting chapter in your life. In all you do, trust in the Lord with all your heart... He will make your path straight.

We love you,
Todd, Mom, Dad, Kaylie, Ligia Ann, Grandma,
Grandpa, Marty, all your Aunts and Uncles

Amanda LaPorte & Valerie Morgan

Valerie,
Our greatest joy other than finding each other, was the time we spent with our granddaughter. The fun we've had with you and our horses, our camping trips, and the 4,000 mile road trip across the country will never be forgotten. We're sure you will excel in everything you endeavor.
Love always,
Grandma and Grandpa

Amanda! We have been best friends since 3rd grade and have experienced so many things together, like creating our own cookies. You are more than a best friend, you're my sister. I love you.
Valerie

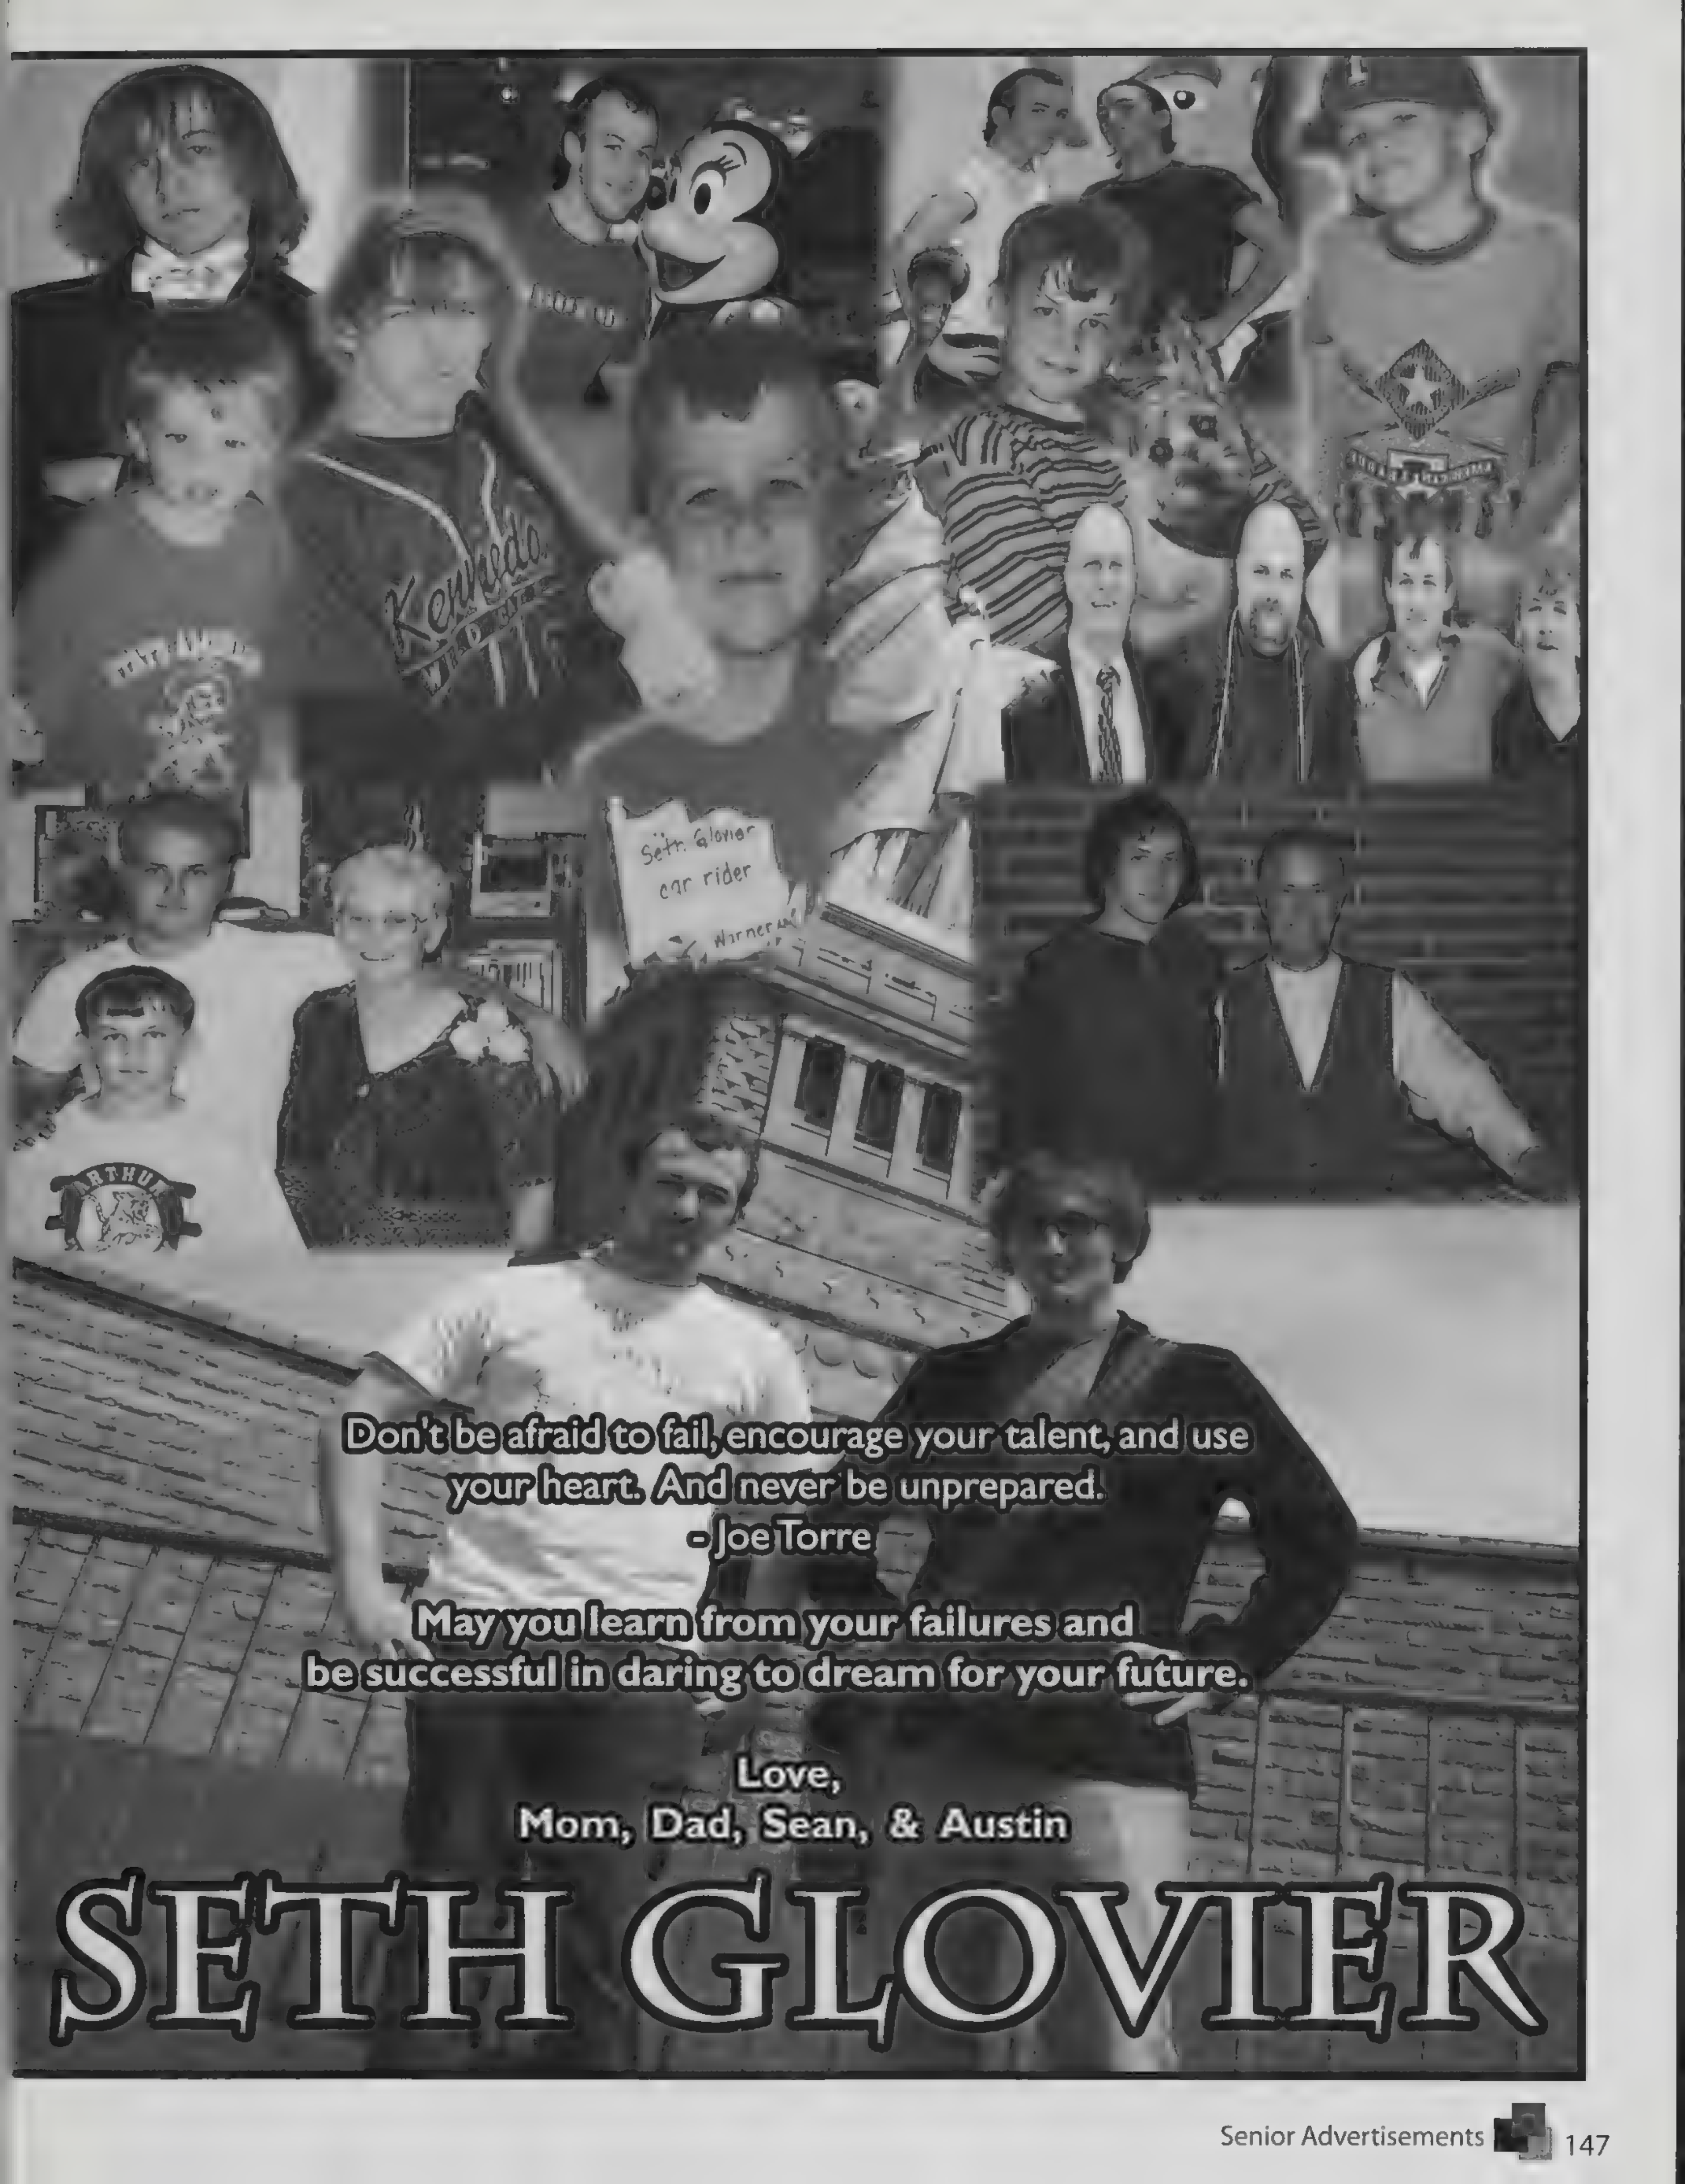

Valerie,
We have enjoyed watching you and Amanda grow up together. We want to thank you for being such a good friend to her.

As we graduate, remember Full House reruns and making our own cookies! One of the greatest memories I will cherish, is walking the stage with my very first friend in Kennedale. I love you.
Amanda

It's your Graduation Day
 As you walk down the Aisles to the main place
 Thank God
 Remember when —
 When you'd be in the You'd think on how & I'd say "Yes!"
 Remember too the day
 & the young woman you've loved Soon now they'll call you
 The adult with responsibilities
 So be brave my youngest Keep the Faith & Believe
 Your wishes & dreams will come true
 & your happiness achieved
 Love Always,
 Mom

I know that my sister and my best friend, that all haven't met. From the telephone like us laugh and say, "Are we not my moments that make us sad, to the moments that make you believe in love, I love you."
 I know that you are more than you know. You've got a heart that's beating, a beating pet, a heart that's beating,
 a heart that's beating for me, and the best of a heart that's beating for me. Hold your heart to the world, hold it at you, and I'll be on the heart that's beating for you.

Austin: 2008 has arrived and you are about to graduate. Looking back it seems not that long ago when you were 5 years old and we were walking you into Mrs. Wakeland's kindergarten class at Delaney Primary and now you are getting ready to go to college. Gosh, where did the time go! Son you have given us so many proud moments and countless memories over the past 18 years. Your determination and character will bring you much success in your next chapter of life along with your families love and faith in God. Thank you for being a wonderful son and Ty's big brother.

We Love You
Always!
Dad, Mom, & Ty

PSALM 32:8

Ashley Camille Alviar

Ashley,
You will always be the beat of our hearts and we are so proud of you. We are truly blessed to be your parents and humbled by your love and how you've honored us. Continue your love for adventure, and don't ever stray from what you know to be true. Always keep the good Lord in your heart, as you know through him all things are possible. You're truly "daddy's girl" and momma's world." We'll always be here for you. There will plenty of time for special talks, but for now Dr. Seuss says it best in my favorite book, Oh The Places You'll Go!

"Your mountain is waiting, so get on your way!" Godspeed

Love,
Mom, Dad, Jojo, Lacy,
Payton & Faith

Kelsey,

We are proud of all you have accomplished but more proud of the person you have become. As you move to the next chapter of your life, never lose sight of who you are. Mark Twain once said:

"Twenty years from now you will be more disappointed by the things you didn't do than by the ones you did. So throw off the bowlines, sail away from the safe harbor. Catch the trade winds in your sails. Explore. Dream. Discover."

So, live life to the fullest! Dream big, laugh often, work hard, love large, and make your own mark in the world.
Love Dad and Jamie

Kelsey Kayser

Kelsey,

I am so proud of the young woman you are and your commitment to family and friends. Your accomplishments are well-earned through lots of talent and hard work. You are beautiful, creative and simply light up a room when you are in it! My prayer for you is that Jesus would always be the center of your life. I love you very much.

Aunt Tonya

Kelsey,

We have so many wonderful memories of you growing up. Some of them are you staying with us before you started school, baking cookies, going to the zoo, camping, going hunting. After you started to school we looked forward to all the holidays and summer to spend time with you. Love the Lord and live for Him and you will be a success. Choices you make will define your life in the end.
Love Always and Forever,

PaPa and MiMi

Kelsey,

We are very proud of you as you reach this one of many major milestones in your life. Remember to believe in yourself for within you is everything you will ever need to make your dreams come true. So as you continue on your educational journey, may you look to new achievements with a sense of pride and faith in your unique abilities. "And I am certain that God, who began the good work within you, will continue His work until it is finally finished on the day when Jesus Christ returns." Philipians 1:6

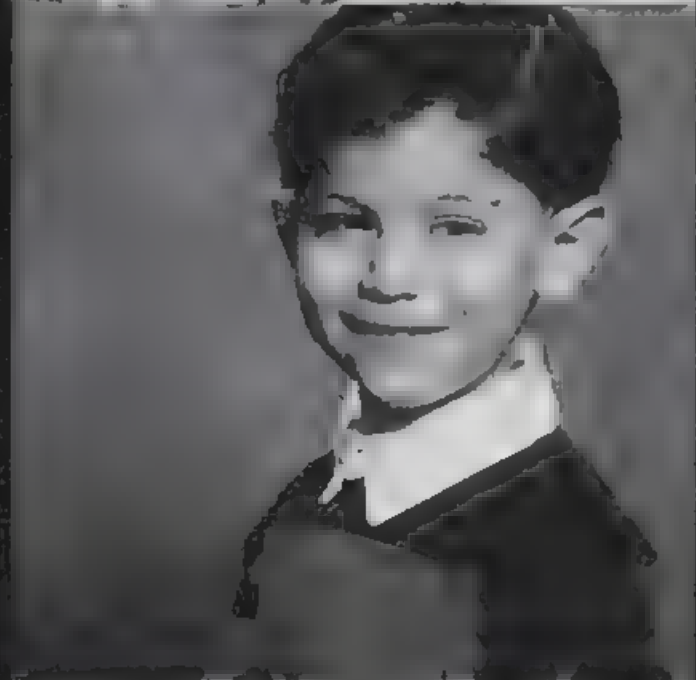

We love you,
Aunt Renee', Uncle Merle, and Trey

Kelsey,

I am very proud of all that you have done. I know you are going to be very successful at whatever you do. And I will miss you very much while you are in college. I love you and good luck! Love,
Katelyn

Kelsey,

It seems like just yesterday when you were born and I was wearing that shirt, "Mom's pride and joy!" You still are and you always will be. Thank you for being such an amazing daughter. I love your sweet and gentle spirit. I'm glad you are the peacemaker with your friends and family...I know you are going to make a great psychologist someday. You're BEAUTIFUL and I love you very much,
Mom

John Avila

May God enable you to know right from wrong and have good judgment and common sense.
Let wisdom be more valuable to you than precious jewels.
Nothing compares to it. For wisdom gives: A long life, riches, honor, pleasure, and peace.
May wisdom be to you a Tree of Life and may you continually eat her fruit.

Congratulations John on completing high school! What a blessing it has been for us over the years to see you mature and develop into an intelligent, responsible, compassionate, humble, and unselfish young man. Thank you for the joy and light that you brought into our lives. As you close this chapter and embark on a new one, our prayer is that you be ever mindful of God's presence in your life. We thank Him for planting a pure soul within you. May God direct you and crown your efforts with success. You have made us very proud with all your academic and extracurricular achievements and can only expect higher things from you. We could not have had a finer son and an awesome big brother than you. Good luck in college and future studies!

We love you very much,

-Mom, Dad, and Noët

CINDY & TARYN

Cindy Du & Taryn Smith

Sissy,

Thinking about you graduation takes me back to the days when we would be playing with our Barbie's and dream about going to High School, our first prom, and finally -- the day we would graduate. Throughout the years, I always thought of it as my responsibility as the big sister, to protect you and make sure you come out a well-rounded and respectable girl. I am extremely proud of the young lady you have become. As you are thrown into the crazy world, remember that I love you and will always be here for you. Follow your dreams and never accept anything less than what you deserve. Love always, Shelby.

Taryn,

It's hard to believe that just seventeen years ago you came into our lives. From the beginning, you have been so in love with life... laughing, clowning, and wanting to do the adventurous things that life has to offer. You also showed a problem-solving side of you that would amaze us. Now it is time for you to begin your adult life, a time for you to accomplish those goals that you wish to achieve. We know that your life will be amazing!!! We love you and are proud of whom you've become. You're our beautiful girl. Love, Mom and Dad.

Taryn, of all the friends I've drifted away from throughout the years, I'm really glad you weren't one of them. You will always be my Oompa Loompa! Love, Cindy Cindy, you've finally made it! You have no idea how proud of you we are. You've accomplished so much and have been so great in everything you've done. We know you'll do incredible in college. Love, Mom & Dad.

Congratulations Cindy! Now that you're done with high school and moving onto college, you can come and do my homework for me! Kidding... I just want for you to remember that if you ever need help with anything, someone to talk to, a shoulder to lean or cry on, you know I'll always be there for you. I miss you lots and wish you were here with me. Take the best of care baby girl and good luck! Love Always, Your Big Sis Sherry

Baby, you're finally graduating! You have accomplished so much within your 4 years of high school and I know that this is only the tip of your iceberg. You still have your whole life ahead of you and I am so glad to be a part of it. In the two years that we have been together, I have only seen great things come out of you and know there will be more to come in the near future. I wanted to say that I love you and will always be by your side throughout your life. I hope for you to join me in college soon and wish you good luck in whatever it is that you desire. Love, Robert

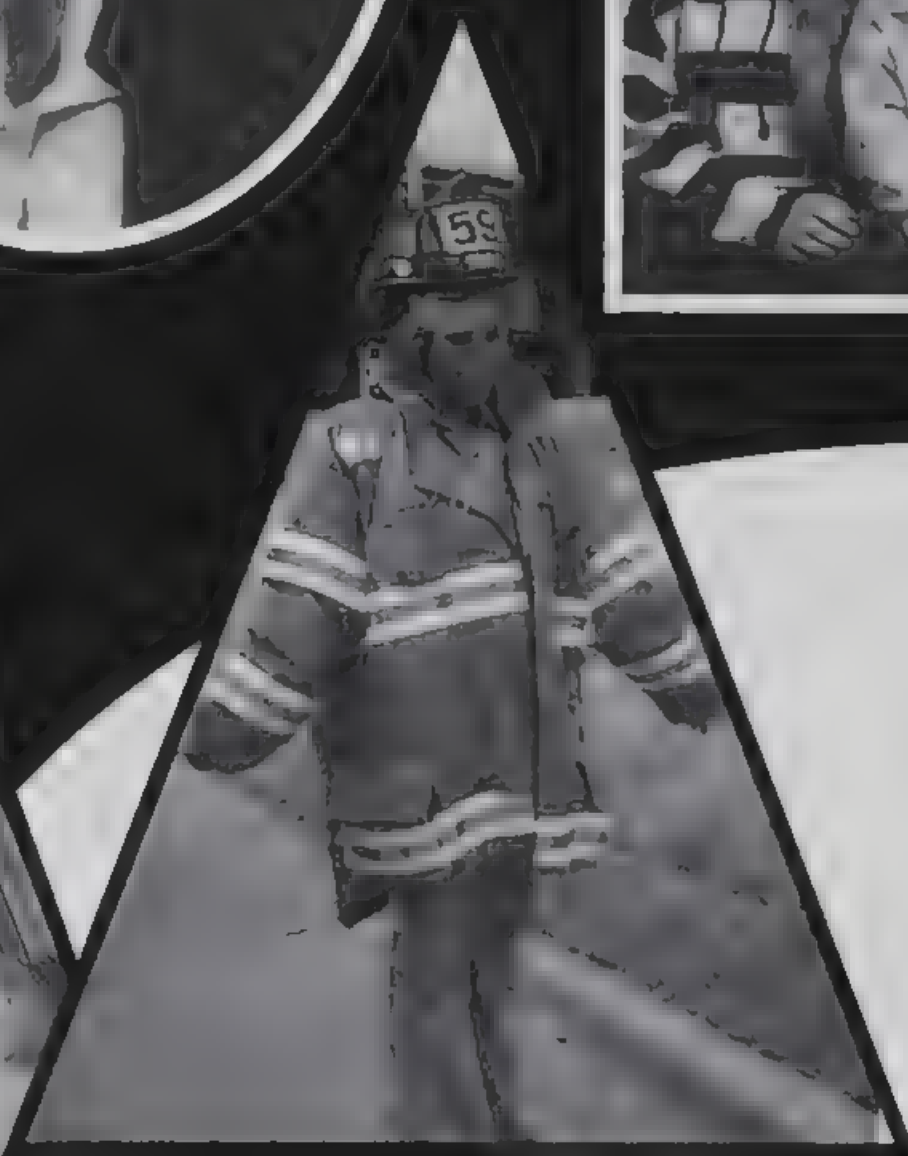

Cindy, you have been such an amazing friend to me throughout the years! You have always been there for me whenever I needed you. I love you so much! We have so many great memories and I hope we can still make some more after we graduate. Love you! Taryn

My Precious Brittany,
 You exploded into my life, an unstoppable force, a ball of fire bent on living life to the fullest, amazed by every new discovery you made with no exception to how simple or profound it might be. You march by your own beat, yet maintain the highest of morals and values. You are not afraid to meet a challenge head-on, whether it is a difficult task or defending someone you felt has been wronged. You truly understand what family and friendship is about. You are a beautiful girl with a beautiful heart and I am so very proud of you. Never lose that fire.
 I love you so very much.
 Always,
 Mama

Weasel,
 I'm so proud of you!

 do well in college.
 I love you.

Serena DeLeon

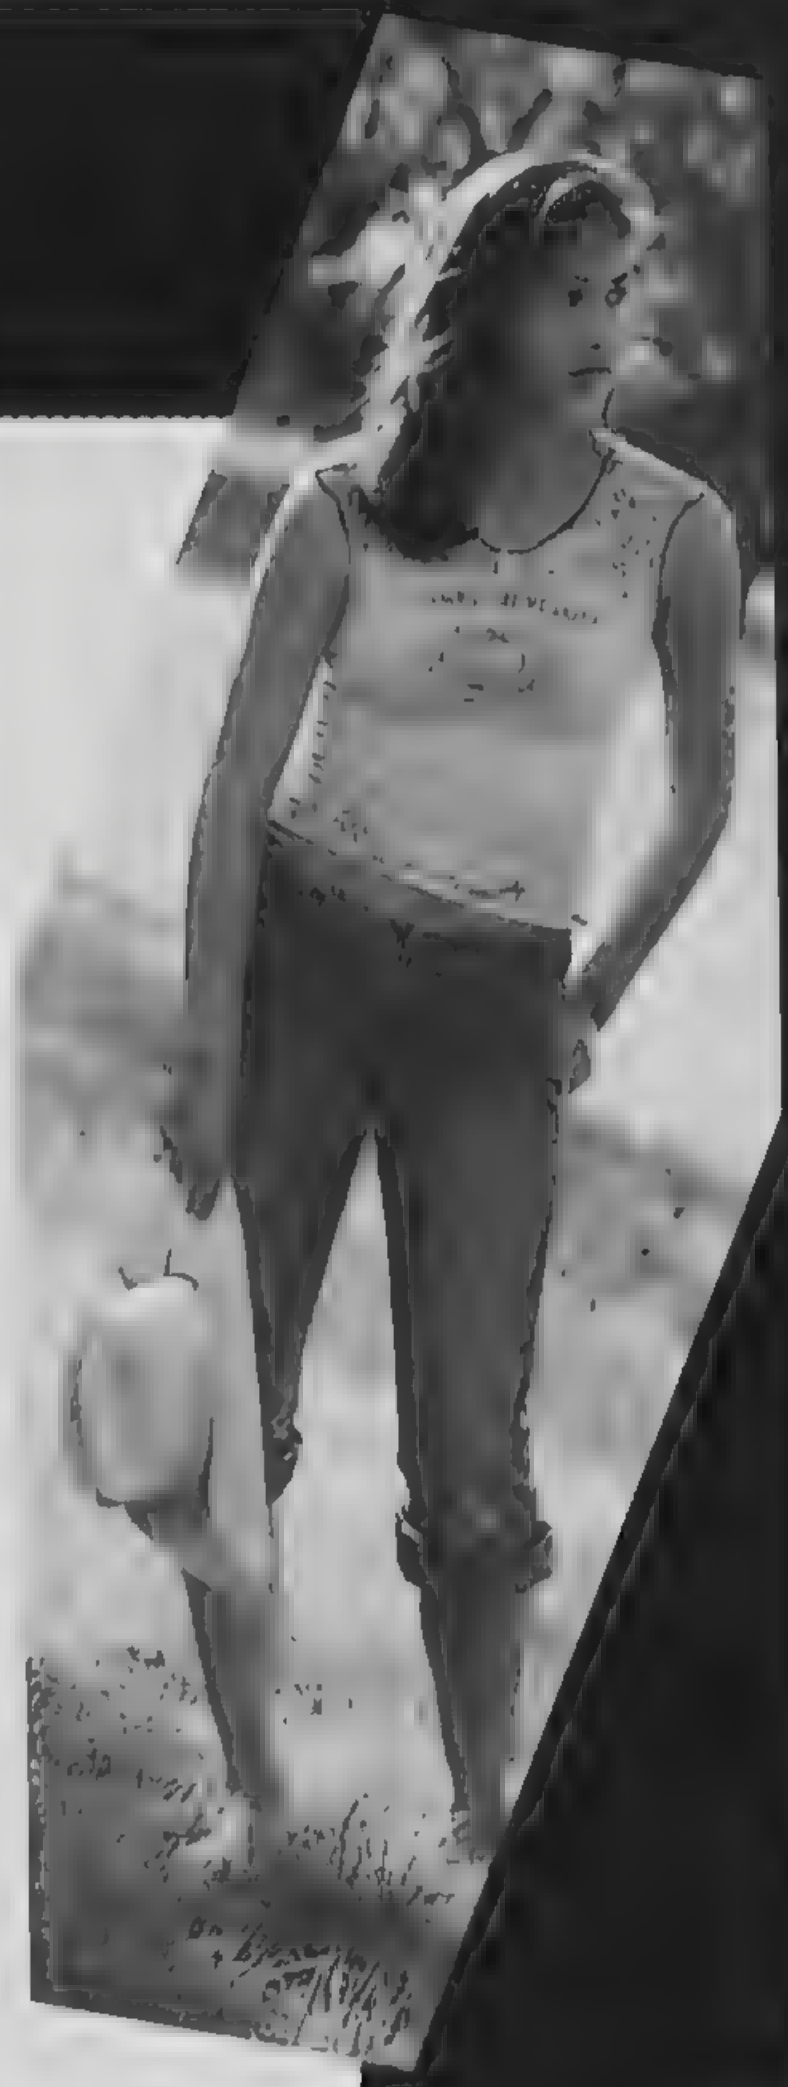

To our sweet Serena,

It has been 18 years, we can hardly believe it, you are all grown up and ready for the world. I hope you take the lessons from school and the lessons from home, into what seems an uncertain world, believe in the Lord and know that with all this knowledge and with the blessings that God can bestow upon you, there is no way you can fail at whatever you attempt to do in life. You are the twinkle in our eyes and the beat of our hearts, we loved you the second you were born and we will love you until the day we leave this world. You are part of our legacy and we will always be proud of what you do

It was just yesterday that you fluttered your lips at anyone that made baby sounds at you and you have never looked back. You are strong and beautiful and your personality will be remembered by all your friends, past, present, and future. You will touch many lives one day and your name will be known by many. People will look up to you for advice and help, which you will be glad to give them, this is who you are. You bring a smile to those that no one notices; you make the ones who never laugh at anything, laugh until they cry. This is who you are, you are our special little girl that we love so very much and we cannot wait to see what you will do with your future. We know it will be bright and beautiful, because that is who you are

Serena, your Mom and I will always be there for you and you will always have a home to come home to. College is in your future and your future will be bright with possibilities and promises of a better tomorrow. Nothing in life is easy, but you know that now. Nothing in this world comes without a price, but you know that now. You will have to work very hard for a better tomorrow, but you know that now, because that is who you are

Love you always,
Mom and Dad

Hannah Anderson

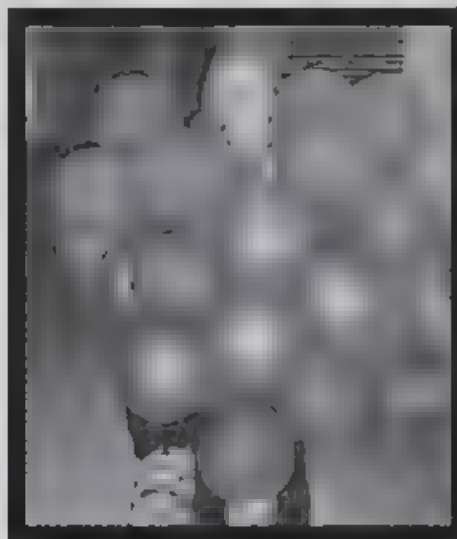

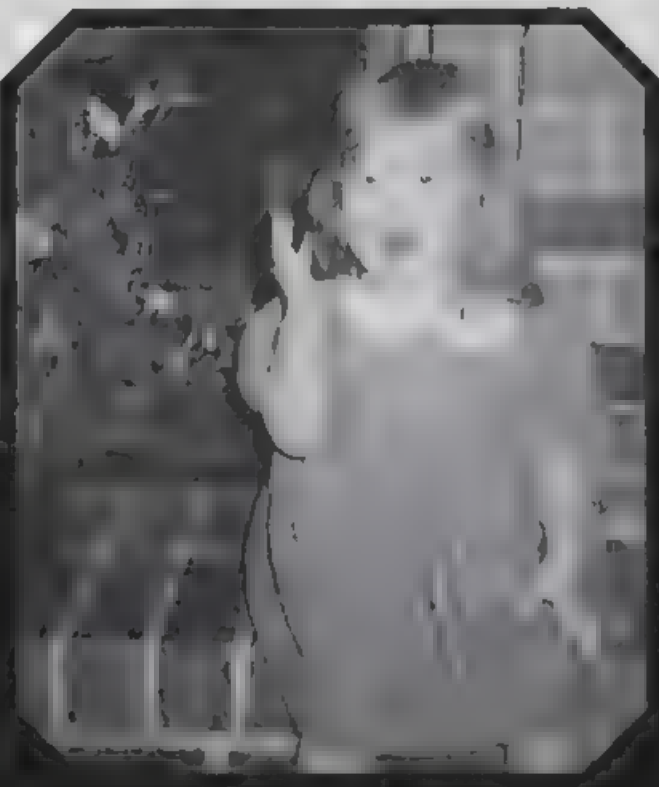

To our Hannah,

It is said that time flies, and your last thirteen years of school, and seventeen years of life have been at supersonic speed.

Our baby girl, the one with biscuit cheeks, has grown into a beautiful, caring, independent young woman. From the "gifted" child in kindergarten to the senior class leader, your journey has been one to watch, admire and enjoy for us all.

You have done it all, and done it all so well. Honors classes show your academic prowess. But you are made of more than brains. Beauty too, and that is obvious to all, but you are more than a pretty face. From the hurdles on the track, to cross country, to the basketball court your long legs carried you through. And now as Willie the mascot, your spirit and dedication to your school shine true. As a "PAL" leader, you mentor our youth. A more positive role model we can't imagine. Your voice came from God and you share it through choir with us all. Your voice led you to the Big Apple, and we fear it may not be the last time.

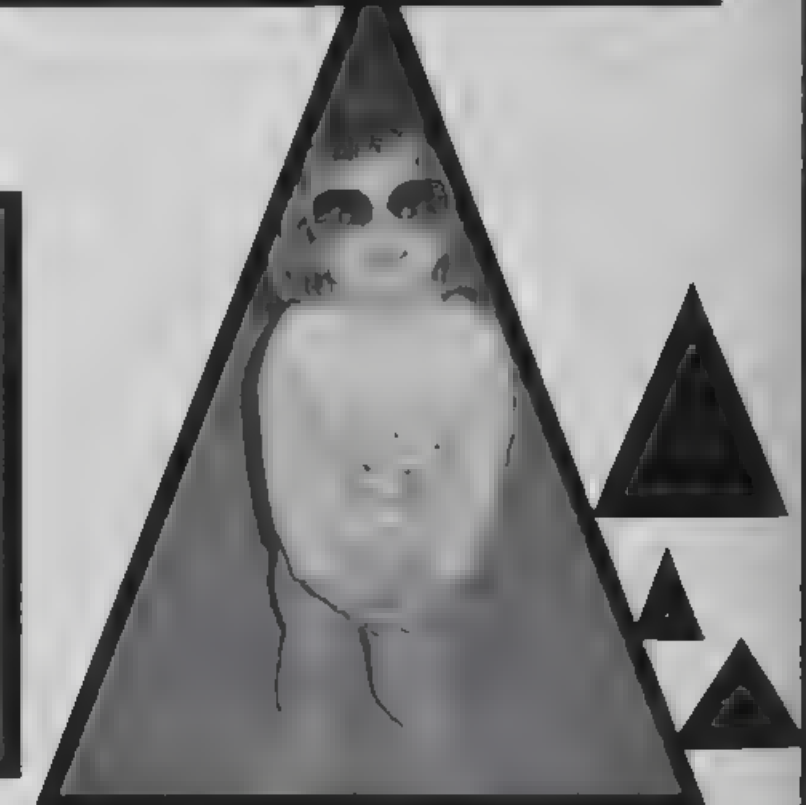

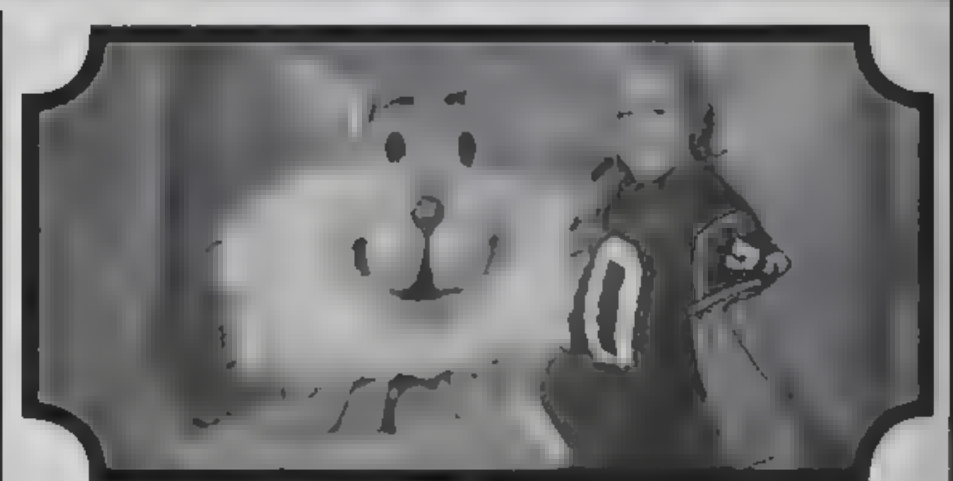

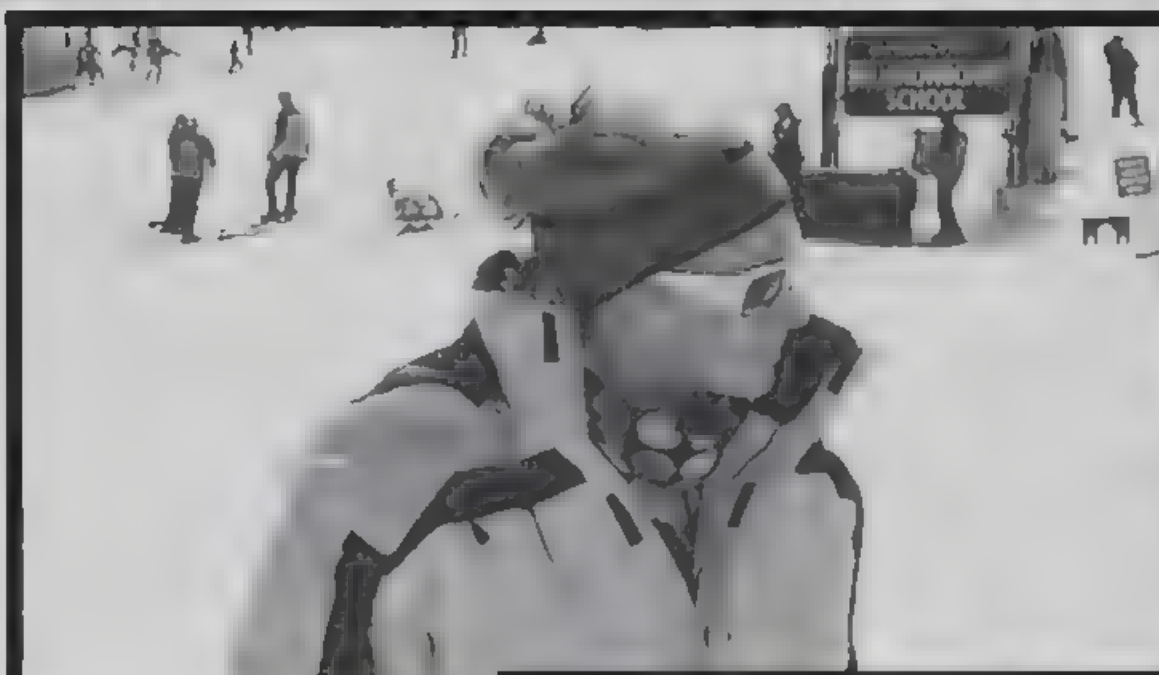

And just when we think you've done it all...the lead role in the musical! Out of the blue a new challenge overcome and yet another triumph. By now we shouldn't be surprised, yet you still amaze us.

Yet all those things pale compared to the daughter and sister you are. You love, and are loved more than any could deserve. You are led by God, and are true to His ways. We adore you in all ways, and always will.

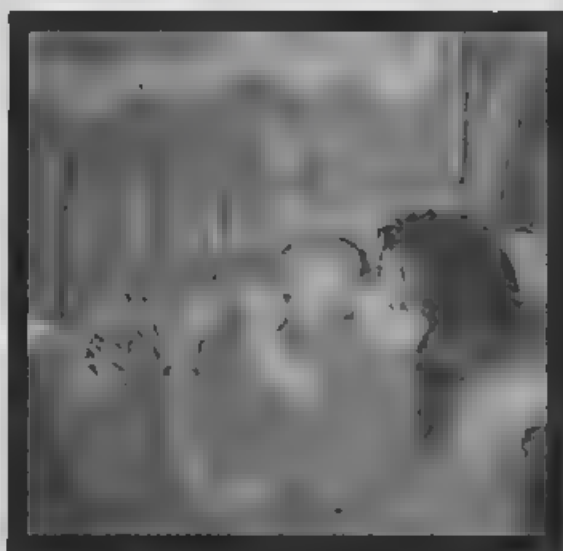

It's been great, but we know the best is yet to come. Congratulations to our baby girl... Ree-Ree!

Love,
Dad, Mom, and Ben

Dustin Williams

I can't believe the time is already here...my baby is graduating high school! I am proud of the person you have become. You are strong, but kind hearted with a sweet spirit. Like I have always told you, you can accomplish anything you set your mind to achieve. The world is yours – go for it! Congratulations, baby...I am so proud of you. I love you, Lancey Lou, and I am always here for you.
Always and forever,

From winning championships at racing go-karts, to racing motocross, to playing lead guitar in a band, you have excelled at what you were doing. I am so proud of you.
Love,

I am very proud of you and love you very much.

We love you,
Dad and Michelle

Love you,
Dad & Mom

WOW Elise! How about that! A high school graduate and on your way to the next step in life. We were there when you were born and then were overjoyed when you moved to Texas with your Mom & Dad. You've been such a joy and so much a part of our lives. How special it has been to be a part of your life and watch you grow into a beautiful and wonderful young lady with a great personality and a super sense of humor. Keep laughter in your life and God in your heart. Always, keep your family close and never forget where you came from.

We love you and, BOY, are we proud! From "I am a Dancing Bunny" to "Miss Arlington's Outstanding Teen" and everything in between. What a ride you have taken us on. You have achieved so much in such a short time. Dream big and reach for the stars.

Love, Mimi and Papaw

We remember when you were a dancing bunny and needed help tying your tap shoes. Now you go to dance on your own and just need us to pay for your tap shoes! We want you to go into the next chapter of your life with so many goals of achieving the success you deserve. You are such a talented and beautiful person. Thank you for being the greatest daughter any parents could ever ask for. We are so happy to see you move on but very sad to see you go. We love you with all our hearts and will always be here for you.

I hope that in your future you have the same wonderful opportunity that I have had to have a son like you. And if you do have a son, I hope that you will enjoy watching him play, and grow, and be funny and turn into an incredible person just like I have enjoyed watching you. I am so proud of you and that is something that you will not really understand until you do have your own son. I have cherished and treasured every minute that you have been on this earth and now it is time to let you fly. I know that you will continue to make me proud.

Love you so much,

Gosh... I look up to you in so many ways; the way you aren't afraid to be who you are, the way you don't give up, and the way you go after what you believe in; or what you want. You are always there for me even when I don't want to talk at all. Honestly... I will miss you so much, especially since I am going to be in high school with a lot of drama. You are a special person that I know will do great things (no matter how many boys get in your way.) Don't ever give up Marissa. You are meant to be famous and known around the world!

Kennedale Wildcats. That identity has become a part of all of us. It is the identity we associate with pride, spirit, victory, and many memories. We have walked the halls this year as students, teachers, and other faculty members everyday, and with each step we have earned the title of a Wildcat. All of us have seen this year fly by, sweeping up with it memories from classes, clubs, and other activities of the school year. Throughout the year we have become part of each other, the community, and especially the school. Whether we just completed our first year as high school students, are graduates ready to identity defined

face the real world, students who moved away after a few months, teachers finishing their first year, or teachers finishing their twentieth year, Kennedale has touched each of our lives and has played an important role in defining who we are. With each choice we have defined this year: whether we took a job at the new Wal-Mart, made the relationship "official", or chose to go to college or work, we have made those decisions with the encouragement from our peers and the knowledge gained at KHS. A piece of Kennedale will always be with us no matter where the road takes us because we have grown in every aspect of our lives while working or learning here. We have grown to love our school! We have come to have pride in the place we could even call home; which led us to make Kennedale known as the best in the metroplex. We have succeeded in representing Kennedale to the highest level possible, as well as ourselves, in everything we have attempted. We have become State Champs a number of times, we have defeated the competition in academics, and we have upstaged all other schools in theatre. As we finish out the school year we look forward to what comes next. We look forward to defining ourselves once more as sophomores, juniors, seniors, college students, or professionals. Each one of us can look back on this year and be proud of the identity we left Kennedale with: identity of superiority and accomplishment, an identity of academic integrity, an identity of complete athletic victory, an identity of successful workers and student, and an identity of pride, love, and encouragement. One question remains to be asked about how each one of us spent this year while defining our school and community. How did you define yourself this year?

The 2008 Wildcat Track Yearbook, volume 58, was printed by Taylor Publishing in Dallas, Texas. The press run was 410 books for fall delivery. The yearbook was sold for $50. Book covers could be personalized with names and logos for an additional five dollars each. The 8.5" x 11" book contains 184 pages (11 ½ signatures) and was printed on eighty pound enamel paper.

The Wildcat Track was produced digitally using Adobe InDesign CS3 and Adobe Photoshop CS3. The cover design was created by the staff using Adobe Illustrator CS3. The standard typestyle used was Myriad Pro in eleven point for body copy and seven point for captions. Christina typestyle was also used in the main titles.

Student portraits, athletic team pictures, and organization pictures were all taken by Glamourcraft Studios of Fort Worth. They also took photographs at homecoming, prom, and graduation. All photographs were digital.
